WALKING FOR WATER: This enthusiastic group of walkers led the way from Rotary Beach at the official beginning of this year's Walk for Water. The event raises more than $10,000 to help bring clean water to people in Third World countries. For more details, see story on Page 2.

Businesses fuming as Dysart waits for report

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK
Staff Reporter

Temperatures are rising high in Haliburton as local businesses try to file damage claims in the wake of the May 23 Moss's Pond beaver dam flood.

While the municipality waits for the results of an engineer's study on the flood to come in, Haliburton residents affected by the deluge say that they are being kept in the dark about its causes because the council is afraid the finger of blame will point at them.

"I don't like (Dysart et al Reeve) Bill Davis's attitude about this situation at all," says Beryl O'Connor, owner of Highland Window and Glass.

She and other business people in the area are critical of the way Davis and the entire Dysart council has handled the details in the flood's aftermath.

Last week the municipality decided to wait for an engineer's report on the cause of the flood before commenting on who or what was responsible for the breaking of the beaver dam.

"He's playing games with us," says O'Connor. "I don't know who's responsible, but I don't want to be stuck in the middle."

O'Connor's store suffered extensive damage as torrents of water ripped through Maple Avenue on its way to Head Lake. Although she hasn't estimated the entire cost the flood has cost her business, she admits to spending "a lot of time just cleaning up the mess, and paying workers overtime to help out."

She and her husband are furious that the council hasn't publicly advertised instructions on how people can forward damage claims to the municipality. O'Connor says that all the information she's heard about flood claims "has been through word of mouth."

In a telephone interview yesterday, Dysart Clerk-Treasurer Donna McCallum said that anyone with a damage claim resulting from the flood should forward a letter stating damages and expenses to the Dysart municipal office. These will be forwarded to the municipality's insurance company for review.

Although her business is keeping its head above water, O'Connor is concerned for people who aren't fortunate enough to have kept some money aside for a rainy day.

"We're lucky we have money in the bank. Otherwise, who would have covered our bills? It's so ridiculous, the whole thing just makes me sick."

Meanwhile, Davis says that the engineers studying the flood hope to have their report completed in a week. Until their report comes in, he says, it is useless trying to comment on the situation.

"It's going to be hard to determine a cause," he says. "I can have my suspicions, you can have your suspicions, but we need to have some evidence."

Davis admits that the road superintendent and crew and council "have been taking some flak" over the flood, but the municipal council won't do anything about it until the engineer's study is released.

If it turns out that the flood was the municipality's fault, he says, then all claims will be covered by liability insurance.

Until then, Davis says he and the council express sympathy for people hit by the flood.

"It's tough — there are people hurting out there. Everyone to a person on council feels for what they're going through. I feel badly for them."

"It's really complex. It's not a cut-and-dried thing and the severity of the situation is very great."

Severity or no, Jill Cook of Cook's Produce argues that the municipality's response to the Echo chosen best in Canada for 2nd year

For the second year in a row, The Haliburton County Echo has been judged the best community newspaper in Canada in its circulation category. The award for overall excellence came in annual Canadian Community Newspaper's Association Competition involving more than 800 small town papers in all 10 provinces.

In addition to the first place award for broadsheet newspapers with a circulation of 4,500 to 6,499, The Echo garnered two other awards. Publisher Len Pizzezy was awarded first prize for the best editorial on a local topic published in a paper with a circulation between 4000 and 12,499, and editor Martha Perkins was awarded a second prize for her feature writing in the same circulation category.

The Echo has won almost 40 provincial and national awards since 1978.

The Minden Times was also an award winner in the CCNA competition. The Times' coverage of a neo Nazi rally in the area won in the best news story category. The Times was also awarded a third place for sports photography in a paper with a circulation of less than 3,999, and earned third place in the community service category.

Tent Caterpillar population on the decline, MNR reassures

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

People who see the pest clinging tenaciously to their tree branches may disagree, but the Forest Tent Caterpillar population is about to collapse.

"There are local pockets of fairly high populations but on the whole, they're declining," says James Munn, a Ministry of Natural Resources forest technician.

As well, the large number of friendly flies, a natural parasite, "indicates the soon-to-be-collapsing population."

The areas still suffering from infestation are generally south of Minden. There's also a high population near Salerno Lake, in Snowdon.

Caterpillar infestations occur naturally every 10 years. Populations peak for three or four years before parasites increase their populations enough to kill off the caterpillars.

Besides the nuisance factor, tree health is the main concern when the caterpillars arrive. After the caterpillars eat the first foliage, trees can usually produce a second cover in late June or early July. Trees can do this, if there are no other stresses, for three or four years and still remain viable.

But the MNR is worried about the past two dry summers. "A lot of the trees here grow in shallow soil which is susceptible to drought damage," says Munn. They're hoping there will be more rain this year to help the trees recuperate.

CAS executive quits

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

The business manager of the Kewartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society has resigned after the board of directors discovered $220,000 in expenditures which had not appeared on the year end report.

Society President Roy Wood says Brian Wing's resignation is the result of the business manager's incorrect assessment of costs in a single area.

"There wasn't any money spent that didn't have to be spent," Wood says. The discrepancy occurred on the boarding rate line, which states the amount paid to foster parents and group homes. Wood says no one has any control over the money spent in this area: "When people show up, we have to take them in."

At each month end, Wood says Wing changed the accounting figures because he did not believe the stated boarding costs. "He didn't believe the numbers," says Wood of Wing's assessment. Since Wing thought the figure was more than what the socie-

Cellular phones hit Haliburton

by SALLY RITCHIE

Expansion of cellular phone coverage up through the Highlands has simultaneously made customers and cellular phone salespeople very happy.

John Stethem, owner of Trucks Plus, says sales of cellular phones have increased substantially. "The last two weeks have been phenomenal," he says. Recent customers have included local business people, contractors and homemakers.

Construction contractors appreciate the flexibility a phone offers, Stethem says. Workers with portable phone units can be dropped off at remote locations and can call when the job is completed. As well, the phones are popular with cottagers who are unable to have regular phones installed.

Stethem says business commuters use the phones to "turn non-productive time into productive time." As well, better communica-

Minden teen runs on goodwill and dreams for Walk

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK
Staff Reporter

SKINNY AS A POPSICLE STICK, Aaron Tomlinson flies down the winding road to where the boat is waiting to take the Walkers-for-Water across Lake Kashagawigamog.

As he passes a group of women strolling through the course at a dogged, earnest pace, one of them mutters, "There goes another speedster." Before he finishes the 19.6 kilometre circuit, Tomlinson will pass two walkers who started at 6:30 in the morning — almost three hours before his own start.

On the road at 9:10 a.m. and finishing at 11 a.m., Tomlinson took exactly one hour and 50 minutes to complete the 1990 Haliburton Walk For Water last Saturday morning.

Not bad. Especially when you consider that Tomlinson is a 13-year-old kid.

"I love running," he says. "It's really a lot of fun and it keeps you active."

And profitable, too — for some people. That's because he and co-participant Norm Wallace also racked up $883 in pledges for Help A Village Effort (HAVE).

This year the Walk For Water event raised over $10,000 for HAVE, which is down slightly from last year's total of $12,000. But when all the receipts are in, the figure might be higher.

"We're quite happy," says organizer Keith Hill. "This year we had a smaller number of participants in the walk but still had pretty much the same receipts. It was a perfect day."

All the money raised by the Walk For Water goes to projects in developing countries. Thanks to the efforts of local participants and sponsors, villagers in such countries as India now have reliable sources of clean drinking water. HAVE also helps fund a community health centre in India.

Although Tomlinson is happy to see the money

FUTURE BILL RODGERS? 13-year-old Aaron Tomlinson ran the 19.6 km Walk for Water course in one hour and 50 minutes.

going to a worthy cause, he would be happy to run the circuit for nothing. Besides running it this year, he has also run the Walk For Water in 1985, '86, '87 and '89.

Currently in Grade 7 at Archie Stouffer Public School in Minden, Tomlinson says he would like to run marathons one day — but 20 kilometres is the longest he's run so far.

Tomlinson holds the school record for the 2.4 kilometre cross-country run, which he completed in six minutes and 45 seconds. He also runs 100, 200, 400, 800 and 1500 metre races.

Other interests of his include the high-jump and the long jump. But participating in any kind of sport keeps him happy.

"My goal is to become a gym teacher," he says. "It would be fun to come back to Minden and teach gym at the school."

Flood victims frustrated: 'Any idiot' can see the problem

flood's victims was less than tactful.

"There should have been some money up front," she says. "I've lived here all my life and it would have been nice to see some goodwill from the municipality."

Cook's store also suffered damage from the flood, although she is currently back in business. She isn't sure what the final cost of the damage will be, however.

"Our building is sound, but they've found cracks and things out of whack. Apparently it takes a year for either the ground or the building to settle, so we'll have to wait and see."

Cook says she was lucky her family was there with money to help her out for the first week after the flood. Meanwhile, she has hired a lawyer to help her out with her damage claims.

"Someone's going to pay for this," she says, "and it's not going to be us."

According to Brent Clarkson, manager of Ian R. Pepper, the insurance adjusters handling the Dysart case, approximately a dozen claims have been received by his office to date.

But he adds that the total damage will not reach the original estimates quoted in the days immediately following the flood.

"The damage will be substantially less than originally assessed," he says. "I don't think it will reach a million dollars or anywhere near that."

Asked about when Haliburtonians can expect cheques to cover their damages, Clarkson laughed and said his company was also waiting for the engineer's study to be presented.

"As soon as we hear from the engineers, we will get in touch with everyone who sent in a damage claim. It's unfortunate — and I feel for the victims — but I don't know where the liability rests. It might not be with one party, and it could be complicated.

"I don't expect a fast answer is going to come — it might be a few weeks. But the insurance company is hopeful the claims can be solved amicably."

His hopes, however, are not shared by many flood victims. "I bet they're hoping things will settle down and we'll forget about it," says Beryl O'Connor. "But it hasn't. Maybe it would have helped if the council would have come in here with a shovel and helped us scrape the mud and sludge off the floor."

"They'll just play their little game and drag it out as long as they can — they're wasting a lot of money having this major study done, but any idiot can tell you what the situation is."

Cantel extends phone service

tion improves customer relations, Stethem says. And, he adds, various features, such as detailed billing, allow such people as consultants to charge phone usage to the appropriate accounts.

Cantel recently announced that effective May 18, its coverage was extending from Highway 401, north along Highway 35 through Fenelon Falls to Halls Lake. Highway 121 northeast from Fenelon Falls to Minden and Haliburton also falls within new coverage area, as does the Lake of Bays.

John Parish, a real estate agent with Bowes and Cocks, is also happy with the new coverage, although, "So far it has cost me money." Parish says his phone has a Toronto number because it was purchased before coverage in this area was available. So much of his travelling and phone work is done within the Toronto area, that a Toronto number was less expensive than one in this area code. Therefore, any calls he now receives in this area, even calls coming from within the county, are long distance.

However, Parish says he is changing to a local number, and expects the expansion in coverage to increase his business. Because he gets calls he would otherwise miss, he thinks it is a good profit tool. Having had the phone for over a year, he estimates he will probably use it ten times a day with the expanded service.

Nonetheless, he cautions cellular phones "can be habit-forming" and must be treated as business items to be worth their cost.

Stanhoppers see 12% tax rise

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Were it not for county and education levies, Stanhope council would have been able to keep its tax increase in the single digits.

Township residents will pay 11.9 per cent more when their 1990 tax bill arrives, although municipal costs have only increased 8.9 per cent. On a $500 assessment, that means they'll pay $642 compared to $574 last year, or a $68 difference.

Details of the budget are not available at this time. All departments—except Fun Day which will receive $7,000, or $500 less than last year—have increased costs.

More information will be available in next week's Echo.

Manager admits error, resigns ty had spent, he changed it to what he considered a more appropriate number.

During the year-end reconciliation, Wood says Wing discovered the original numbers were correct. Auditors estimated the boarding rate figure at $1.8 million; the board had been told it was $1.6 million. Wood says, "When (Wing) realized the error he'd made and the magnitude of it, he resigned. There aren't many people who would do that," says Wood. "He felt it was the honourable thing to do."

Wood says Wing's 10-year work record with the society has been excellent up until this past year. Personal problems have added extra stress, however, "and it meant he wasn't paying enough attention to his job."

Maurice Bradley, the municipality's appointed representative for the society, says the full council has not yet met to discuss the situation. The next meeting is June 20.

Although he doesn't anticipate a decision on cost-sharing measures until that time Bradley says, "We will be paying a portion of this...how much has not yet been determined."

Victoria, Haliburton and Peterborough Counties pay 20 per cent of the society's costs; the remaining 80 per cent is paid by the Ministry of Social Services. Bradley says, "This is funding which we hope will be covered by the ministry, but we're not sure."

Access Awareness Week gets slow start in county

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK
Staff Reporter

ALTHOUGH IT REQUIRES a superhuman effort sometimes, we are often able to empathize with others and "walk a mile in their shoes" to experience what they're feeling.

But what if the person you're trying to understand can't walk? There are no shoes to try on, no frame of reference in which you could possibly understand how that person experiences things.

Well, how about changing the old cliché to "ride a mile in someone's wheelchair?" If only we could spend some part of our lives in one, then we might begin to understand the problems and difficulties our society creates for people who have to spend their entire lives in wheelchairs.

Next Sunday marks the beginning of National Access Awareness Week, which will run until Saturday, June 16.

The purpose of the week is to encourage Canadians to ask themselves what they can do in their communities to ensure that all people with disabilities are able to integrate into all aspects of life.

This means taking a look around and "walking a mile with someone's white cane or seeing-eye-dog," or "walking a mile with someone's crutches." But most of all it means empathizing with people and trying to help them overcome some of the challenges society puts in their way.

How many stores in the county are really accessible to disabled people? Are Haliburton's or Minden's sidewalks accessible for people in wheelchairs? What would a disabled person do if they had to use a bathroom in town?

"We can't expect people to know these things — that's why Access Awareness Week is such a good thing," says Phyllis Sisson, whose life in a wheelchair might be a bit easier if the county provided better wheelchair access for disabled people.

"Awareness Week is great because it makes people aware. It's not to raise money or sympathy." Sisson says that leading a disabled life becomes a vicious circle of sorts because "disabled people can't get out much because there's no access, and when they ask for more access the people ask 'why?', we never see any disabled people outside."

Sisson argues that people deserve to have equal access even if it's only one person involved. "Why not?" she asks. "I'm important enough."

There are over 3.5 million Canadians who have some form of disability. Of those who are listed as severely disabled, 85 per cent say they never attend sporting events, concerts or movies.

Twenty-two per cent say they never visit relatives or friends.

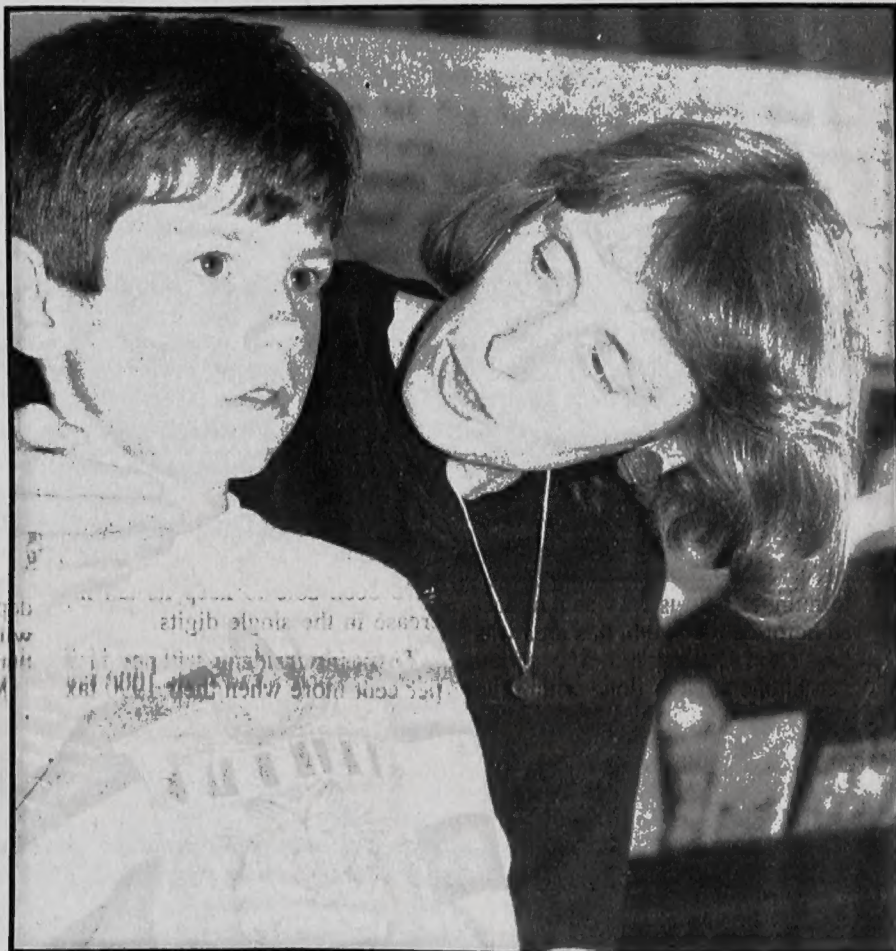

"I know it's costly to renovate old buildings to

"I know it's costly to renovate old buildings to provide access," says Phyllis Sisson. "...I pay taxes and I'm entitled to have access to public places."

Victoria Street School students get a real lesson in special class

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK
Staff Reporter

ABOVE THE BLACKBOARD in Wilma Powers' sunny classroom at Victoria Street School, a yellow sign with large black letters reads: "If children cannot learn the way they are taught . . . then they must be taught the way they can learn."

Another sign in red and black letters tells its readers how to respond to someone who's just had a seizure.

These are just two of the things that make coming to this room a different, eye-opening experience. This is Mrs. Powers' class for developmentally delayed youths. There are usually only three students in her class, but today this number will swell to 25 as a group of Grade 1 and 2 students from Victoria Street's "regular" classes come in for a visit and hopefully learn that Mrs. Powers' students are different, but not wrong.

Three Victoria Street teachers are there to guide these young ones through "a day in the life" of Wilma Powers' students.

"Does anyone know what a seizure is?" asks teacher Anne Graham to the visiting group.

"It's a kind of salad," answers a boy at the back of the class.

"I said SEIZURE, not CAESAR," says Mrs. Graham, this time making sure the 'z' sound in "seizure" is heavily articulated. After a few unsuccessful attempts at answering her question, Mrs. Graham is obliged to explain.

She uses the analogy of an overloaded wall socket which blows its fuse to describe what happens to the brain's neurological system when someone has a seizure.

"It's really important that kids realize that this happens to all kinds of people," says Mrs. Powers, who has taught the class for developmentally delayed youths since 1983.

This is the first year that Mrs. Powers is opening up her class to the "regular" students at Victoria Street, and hopes the tradition will continue in later years. "We have to give the kids a chance to ask questions," she says.

Mrs. Powers' three students are Diane Warburton, who has cerebral palsy and also epilepsy; Dawn Debler, who has Rett Syndrome; and Lee Robinson, who is microencephalic. All require full-time special care as well as physiotherapy.

Awareness Week an eyeopener

provide access," says Sisson, "but I like to think that I pay taxes and I'm entitled to have access to public places."

Two weeks ago an Echo reporter spent part of a day in a wheelchair at Sisson's home. Although the reporter had wanted to cook and clean-up from the wheelchair, Sisson allowed him only to serve lunch and wash the dishes afterwards.

Riding around in a wheelchair is cumbersome, to say the least. Every movement must be plotted or thought out well in advance.

It's not like you can just park your rear in a wheelchair and zip off to the bathroom or answer the telephone. There are hundreds of little things to think of before any movement can be made.

"How will I negotiate that turn? Will I scrape my knuckles if I turn around the kitchen counter?"

It's more difficult than flying around the Monte-Carlo-style highway by Loon Lake.

Serving dinner was a bigger chore than usual. Imagine having to go from the table back to the stove back to the counter several times just to set the table. After all, how many hot pots can one carry in one's lap?

And then there was the numbness in the legs, from the chair cutting off the blood supply at the thighs. And the stiffness in the neck and arms later that night from having to twist into more contortions than Harry Houdini just to put away a few plates and cups.

It was good to get out of the wheelchair.

Things in someone's home aren't even that accessible — how could a town be? The fact is, nothing is really accessible for disabled people in this world.

National Access Awareness Week, however, is a time for people to make some positive changes to how their communities treat disabled people.

This year's theme is: "Awareness plus Access equals Integration," but the emphasis is definitely on education.

There are more than 45 communities across the province that are organizing for this week. Activities range from educational workshops, displays, demonstrations and discussions on various issues pertaining to disabilities.

So far, nothing has been planned in Haliburton County to mark National Access Awareness Week.

The Individuals Desiring Equal Access (IDEA) group was supposed to meet and come up with some activities for the week, but their own disabilities kept them from getting together to organize anything.

"That's one of the problems," says Sisson. "We often can't get anything together because one or two of us might be weak at that time, or we may not be able to physically see each other."

But Sisson is confident that if people just realize that National Access Awareness Week exists then the next step will be to get them involved in actually changing the way disabled people are denied access to most public places in our society.

"After all," she says, "We're just scratching the surface."

three charges, different sections of the school were allowed to visit Mrs. Powers' class — for about one hour at a time — throughout the week of May 28 to June 1.

Before breaking off into little groups, the students were read a story to by Anne Graham, entitled Keith Edward's Different Day, by Karin Melberg Schrier. It is the story of Keith Edward, who meets three people with different disabilities one day.

Keith learns to accept that these people have simply not developed the way he has — just as he can't wink with one eye, the man with Down's Syndrome can't keep his tongue in his mouth, or the woman who is in a wheelchair can't walk.

After the story, the visiting students break into groups and are assigned to either Dawn or Diane (on the day the Echo visited, Lee was home sick), where they can ask questions or help the two disabled students with their physiotherapy program.

Sandy Winder, a Victoria Street teacher, is helping Dawn with some exercises and is also fielding questions from the visitors.

"What's wrong with her?" asks one.

"She was born with Rett Syndrome," answers Ms. Winder. "She can't talk, and she has three toes on her left foot — see?"

Two students look at each other with that gag-me-with-a-spoon look, but one recovers to ask, "how does she talk?"

"She talks with her eyes," says Ms. Winder. "Does she hear with her eyes too?" asks another.

"No, with her ears like you," says Ms. Winder.

For the next 15 minutes until the end of the class, the students are wide-eyed and hungry for information about these "different people."

"We have to teach them now, at this age," says Mrs. Graham. "If we'd try when they got a bit older they'd wouldn't be open — they'd just laugh."

Mrs. Powers thinks it's too bad the rest of the community can't learn to accept and accommodate disabled people as these Grade 1 and 2 students have demonstrated.

"It's so disappointing that the town's not accessible," she says.

"You have to put the shoe on the other foot," adds Ms. Winder. "Put yourself in their spot and see how you cope for a change."

Centralizing children's services considered

Local providers of children's services are looking into forming a county-based agency.

"Haliburton is looking for more control, rather than decisions being made in Peterborough," says Richard Hildreth, manager of the Victoria-Haliburton branch of the Children's Aid Society. "If Haliburton wants to explore that, we wouldn't stand in the way."

At present, there is a Haliburton

CAS office but it is not autonomous. Nor does it deal with all children's needs in the county. The Family and Children's Services act does permit local services to get together to provide services under one agency.

Initial contacts with the Ministry of Community and Social Services indicate the ministry is prepared to fund a study investigating the feasibility of such a move.

Cardiff Reeve Maurice Bradley

alluded to the study when he gave his CAS report to county council last month. "Intake is abnormally high, higher than the peak in July," Bradley said. He was concerned that Haliburton was not using Victoria and Peterborough Counties group homes, even though the county is contributing funds to them.

The study will consider "something happening on the county level," he said.

A Canada Day project proposed by the Community Enrichment Forum did not receive the support of the Board of Education.

At the May 22 board meeting, the forum asked if guidelines and forms for a short essay contest could be distributed through area schools. Designed to be answered by both students and parents in 25 words or less, the essay question is "What Makes Canada Unique?" Winners would be selected by the forum and the winning essays would be printed in the newspapers.

However, board members voiced concerns about the answers the forum would receive. Chairman Len Salvatori said, "People can write awful things on those pieces of paper... and get them printed in the paper."

Stuart Baker, board director, also expressed doubts about the project's success. "We're at a grave crossroads in the country at this time," Baker said in reference to English/French tensions and the Meech Lake debate. He suggested it would not be prudent to take any action which could have negative repercussions.

In a phone interview last week, Ed Moll, United Church minister and Forum member, said he regretted the absence of a forum member at the discussion. "It was partially a mistake on our part," said Moll, adding the presence of a forum member could have prevented any misunderstandings on the part of the board. He said the board had not contacted him with their explanation.

During the planning process, the Forum was not aware such a project would require board approval, said Moll. Despite this setback, the project will go ahead in an altered form. "We'll probably do it a different way."

When told by The Echo of the board's reasons for not endorsing the project, Moll said, "I think that's poor judgement of the community's character."

Development corporation prepares questionnaire

The Haliburton Economic Development Corporation is determining investment opportunities for Haliburton County business people. A questionnaire investigating consumer purchasing trends is being circulated by the corporation with municipal tax bills.

The questionnaire invites people to rate their reasons for shopping in Haliburton County and asks them to identify products or services in the county.

Some 30,000 questionnaires are being mailed out, says HEDC director Andy Campbell. He hopes to receive about 6,000 responses — or about 20 per cent of all questionnaires sent out.

Two prizes are being offered by the corporation to encourage property owners to send in their questionnaires.

The first prize is dinner for four up to $200 anywhere in Haliburton County. Second prize is dinner for two up to $100 anywhere in Haliburton County.

The draw will take place on September 14, 1990.

Once all the questionnaires are in, the corporation will draw up a county business profile from the results of the survey. These will be available from their offices on York Street in Haliburton village.

Not all is clearly bad in decimated forest

CLEAR—CUT.

Achingly ugly hillsides. Miles of mutilated nakedness, punctuated only by rotting stumps — tombstones to the healthy trees that once strained skywards. Lifeless, hopeless hideous. Is that what you were thinking?

This image is not entirely inaccurate. Many Canadian forests have suffered this fate.

But in Haliburton, the reality, though not pretty, is quite different.

A tour of a prescribed burn site is unexpectedly reassuring. Perhaps the most striking feature is the relatively small area involved. Peter Hynard, unit forester at Minden's Ministry of Natural Resources, says in this area 100 acres is the standard size. Clear-cuts are kept small both for aesthetic reasons, and to ensure a variety in available species.

After this area, which is south of Irondale, was clear-cut, a controlled fire was set to burn off all the remaining vegetation. This technique is used in the regeneration of species which are not tolerant of other tree types during the early stages of growth.

A year later, no one could call the site attractive. There is lots of dirt, and a few scorched remnants of its former appearance. And compared with the forests which embrace it, the burn site is barren. Yet nature's resilience is very much evident. In one area lies a luxuriant swamp, blissfully ignorant of last summer's fire, which Hynard says burnt away its vegetation in about 60 seconds. Trilliums blossom valiantly, and a single, hardy tree survives. It is a "plus tree", named for its superior form and growth characteristics. High above its charred trunk, leaves proclaim its last stand against human assault.

If you lower your sights, and look very carefully, you can see small green bunches dotted about. Barely noticeable at a height of about five centimetres, these healthy bushes are just starting life in the wild. They are white pines, and are already three years old; their early years were spent in a greenhouse. Two weeks ago, they were meticulously replanted here.

Decades ago, the white pine grew abundantly in this county, since the species is well suited to the soil and climate conditions. "Haliburton was built on white pine and the settlers who came to log it," says Hynard. Unfortunately, the species was virtually wiped-out by ruthless logging methods and fire after fire. "White pine is a fine species," says Hynard, "but it won't regenerate naturally after decades of logging and repeated fires."

Silviculture — the careful, planned treatment of trees as a renewable crop — is a new approach. "Trees all behave differently and all have different niches," explains Hynard. Silviculture is the attempt to create the right circumstances for the desired crop. "It's matching your treatment to your site and your species."

"Everyone loves the white pine," he says, because it is a highly marketable wood which draws a good profit. Hence last summer's prescribed burn and this season's replanting.

White pines are able to withstand brutal soil conditions, but need a lot of light to survive. Since they grow very slowly for the first five years, the fire was used to eliminate any potential competitors. To ensure a quick and thorough burn, the area was pre-treated with herbicides. Hynard says the use of herbicides is not well-received, but they are essential to the success of a burn. Moreover, these herbicides are not more hazardous than most used on domestic lawns and gardens.

In addition, the foresters have altered the area's "microclimate"; the lack of other growth means the area will be hotter in the summer, and snow will melt faster in the winter. "We've made it a more severe microclimate to give the competitive advantage to the pine," says Hynard.

This is a very costly process, making the pine one of the most expensive species to regenerate. Other species, such as poplar, regenerate with ease. Since it reproduces asexually (from root systems), pine rapidly regenerates after a clear-cut.

"It's cheap and it's easy and it works every time," Hynard says. But pine is not a valuable wood, and it is not marketable right now. It is very soft, and does not take varnish or paint very well. Although it is good for paper, few local mills can use it for this, and transporting it to those that can is too costly.

Problems with marketability must be dealt with by careful planning, says Hynard. Foresters are attempting to grow forests that are useful and practical. Diversity in available timber as well as sawmill applications are required, but the process of change will inevitably take some time. Currently, only 34 per cent of Haliburton's timber is harvestable. While some may believe less logging is good, it is not always the case. Much of the area's poplar is aging rapidly, and must be cut before it dies on the stump, becoming useless. "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear," Hynard says, explaining the dilemma.

This white pine stand will be left for 120 years to reach maturity. The trees have been planted in an irregular pattern to mimic nature, but are about 1.8 metres apart so they all receive maximum light. Occasional trimming will ensure the health of the stand so a full healthy crop will be available at harvest time.

Hynard says even the plus tree will have to be removed from this natural cradle. It is almost dead but its genetic properties have been preserved. Scions, taken from its upper branches, have been grafted onto root stock in a seed orchard: it will be a parent to many other trees.

Critics argue that without the protection of trees, the soil on this stand will not withstand the wind and rain. But only silt and clay soils are susceptible to water erosion, says Hynard. This stand is com-

PLANTING THE BIG ONE: Actually, the trees this person is planting one year after a prescribed burn are only ankle high, but this stump shows what a few years can do. Trees won't be harvested for another century.

Gains & losses

Editor's Note: The following editorial, entitled 'Gains and Losses', and first published published last August, was recently awarded top prize in the local editorial category of the annual Canadian Community Newspapers' Association competition.

The conversation may be as old as the community, but in the past two or three years it has gained a sense of urgency, a heightened intensity that shows no sign of easing. What, people ask themselves, is happening to the community they used to know? Are the way of life it represented and the values it reflected, gone forever, or are they present still beneath the ever changing landscapes and streetscapes of the Highlands? We cling almost desperately to the belief that the fundamental goodness of life in the Highlands has not been altered by the economic boom of recent years, because we want it to be so, but few who care about the community have not felt at least a pang of dismay as they watched the community develop. It is comforting to imagine that a place can grow larger and more prosperous without losing its soul, but the reality may in fact be otherwise.

Since the forces that promote prosperity and fuel development originate beyond the boundaries of Haliburton County, there may be little any of us can do to shape the kind of community we will share five or ten years from now. The pace of life continues to accelerate, and few of us can afford the luxury of being left behind, even if it were possible to step aside and let the headlong rush carry others to their destiny. We cannot live in isolation from the forces that are altering the face and spirit of our community. We can, however, seek to understand a little of what has been gained, and lost, in the recent past, and what may be gained and lost in the future.

What we have gained in the past few years in Haliburton County is a measure of prosperity unprecedented in the 120 years that people have been making a living in the Highlands. Even a decade ago, very few local businesses operated on a solid financial footing. People made livings from them, and were reasonably content, but winters were long and the sense of economic depression that accompanied them, pervasive. Today, while the summer tourist season is important, it is less critical to the economic well-being than it once was, because tourism — including cottaging — is now a year-round industry. A stronger economy has meant an improved job market and higher wages for workers. It has created new opportunities for entrepreneurs and enabled many young people to stay on the community who, only a few years ago, would have had to seek employment elsewhere. Growth has also brought improved services — more skilled tradespeople, better health care, a wider variety of goods, enhanced recreational opportunities. In a strong economy and a growing community, new ideas are encouraged, new challenges met and new energies tapped, often for the betterment of everyone.

The benefits of growth and prosperity are for the most part apparent. — you can see the new stores, houses and cottages, the new faces on main street — but the losses that have accompanied the community's changing face are harder to measure. Diminished, perhaps, are opportunities to know each other. People spare less time to care about their neighbours and the issues that effect the community than they did only a few years ago. Our gaze turns inward, our concerns grow more personal, more selfish, as the pace of life moves faster and we struggle to protect whatever solitude, whatever silence, is left to us. Our desire to belong, our need to share, is no less important than it once was, but we find it easier to ignore these longings than to pursue them in an increasingly impersonal community.

Not long ago, we cherished the comforting ambience of small town life. If it was slower, less sophisticated, less driven by the rage for material success, we liked it that way. It wasn't perfect, but it was suffused with a sense of common purpose — with a sense, indeed, of love.

We may never be able to restore those qualities to our communities, but we should remember them, for their absence is the true measure of our loss.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the Minister of Natural Resources, Lyn McLeod.

Dear Ms. McLeod:

I am writing to you concerning an article I saw in The Toronto Star titled "Sawmill to Close After Rejection of New Licences."

The article states that 400 people lost jobs in the nearby town of Harcourt. There are not 400 people in the town of Harcourt, including men, women and children. The 400 jobs were lost not only in Harcourt but in many, many towns surrounding Harcourt, including Bancroft and Haliburton. Apparently there is a lack of knowledge about this area.

Further in the article, Mr. Allan Stewart, director of the ministry's Algonquin Region, stated that there were 200 mills in this area. The only areas affected by the licences in question are in Hastings County, Haliburton County and Renfrew County. To transport the timber from these licences any further distance would not be feasible. The trucking cost would exceed the value of the low-grade timber. Therefore, I cannot imagine there being 200 mills in this area. There either was a misprint by the newspaper or Mr. Stewart is not familiar with this area.

To clear up the situation, I will conduct my own study with the help of a few of the other unemployed people. I will visually count every sawmill in the three counties. At the end of the two to three weeks (after much travelling), I will send you a detailed report showing where all mills are located and in which county—an accurate count. For your information only, this study will not cost the taxpayer one penny. I hope this will help to clear up some of the misunderstandings and misconceptions connected with this area.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely yours,
Thomas L. Coghlan

Beavers are a washout to flooded writer

To the Editor:

It was very encouraging for me to read Michael Woloschuk's article regarding the views of Gord Bartley on beaver. When I moved into my home in 1955 I was able to do my washing in the basement. In 1959 the beaver thought they needed the surrounding area and now my property has beaver habitation on three sides: south, west and north. I do not live in the bush; my home is on Hwy 121.

During the past year I have had five sump pumps and at present have two new ones to take over if one fails. There has yet to be made a sump pump that can stand constant year round use. The trappers have given up trapping because the price they get for the skins does not warrant the effort. I wish it would become stylish for everyone to wear furs.

I would be glad to hear from anyone who could suggest an efficient means of diverting these animals to the people in the cities who say "save the wildlife." If they have ever experienced the menace the beaver cause they would certainly change their minds.

Monmouth can't hear voice of the people

To the Editor:

Re: The Echo, May 9, 'Irate neighbours petition council on noisy Wilberforce woodcutter'

It seems the interpretation of 'forestry use' attracts misuse while the township shrugs their shoulders with their foggy interpretation. Monmouth council doesn't hear the concerns voiced by their taxpayers.

Monmouth council doesn't see any illegal activity. Monmouth council doesn't say anything.

This is no lone individual 'Wilberforce woodcutter' but a large scale commercial sawmill operation. The issue of noise only drew suspicion, while the operation itself is illegal. Jobs, although welcome, are not the issue. A business cannot set up just

IN HALIBURTON business news this week, we notice that local contractors are turning on the heat in an effort to get some businesses open before the summer tourist season gets underway. The new donut shop in Greg Brown's building on Maple Ave is almost ready to open. Perfect Prints is moving into the former Fenelon Travel office next to the Bank of Montreal and at present, owner Ken Rydman is renovating the building. The big expansion programme at Easton's Valu-mart will soon be completed, and the new furniture store in Greg Brown's building — The Village Court — is preparing for a grand opening. Trucks Plus is on the move and will soon be at their new location in the Shamrock Service Centre, next to the Silver Maple Motel.

Reverend Brian Plouffe and his family, of Lakeside Baptist Church at Haliburton, have lost their belongings to water damage. Other churches in the area are making donations to help them with some of the cost of replacing furniture and clothing.

Both the Dysart arena and the Curling Club buildings in Haliburton will be open this weekend when the Haliburton Curling Club presents the 12th annual Home and Vacation Show this Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 8, 9, and 10. We understand that most of the booths in the arena have been booked and the Curling Club is looking forward to one of the best shows in years.

Along with many people I find it very unfortunate that the Haliburton Laundromat has been forced to close for the time being due to extensive water damage sustained in the recent flood. It will really be missed by local residents and visitors alike. When you need to use the laundromat its something like the old saying that you never miss the water until the well runs dry.

I have mentioned in my column on numerous occasions that the Highlands never seem to receive the kind of recognition that they deserve. When it comes to publicity we always seem to be the forgotten county. But there are certain signs that we are seeing a bit of improvement in this regard. Candel recently inserted a full page advertisement in the Toronto Star advertising the fact that cellular phone service has arrived in the Haliburton area, giving the county a great deal of publicity. The picture in the ad showed the big hill leading out of Miner's Bay with the Hwy. 35 sign in full view.

Meals on Wheels, a service provided by the Haliburton Home Support Services, is still playing a very active and much needed role in many of the communities of Haliburton County. They are endeavouring to provide services to persons in the county requiring meals and are working with Home Care to provide the meals to clients who require the service. Benefits under Home Care are financed through OHIP.

I have been asked to announce that St. Anthony's yard sale, originally scheduled for May 26 and cancelled due to the flood, will be held on Saturday, June 9 from 10 am to 1 pm.

The Haliburton United Church picnic will be held on Father's Day, June 17. The Sunday School would like to invite the whole congregation to join them at Head Lake Park after church for cheese, crackers and watermelon. In case of rain, the picnic will be held indoors at the church.

This week we would like to make a correction. It would appear that in the Haliburton Horticultural Society article in the May 30 edition of The Echo there was a typing error. The membership is $2, not $20. Their grant is based on membership so they are hoping to sell as many as they can.

The walking bridge which enables people to walk from one side of Head Lake Park to the other over the Drag River is being replaced. The old bridge has been taken out to make way for the new. People will have to walk around by crossing over the old railway bridge until the new bridge is completed. I understand that council has been considering putting in a new bridge for some time, but the construction will be hurried up due to the fact that the recent flood made the bridge unsafe.

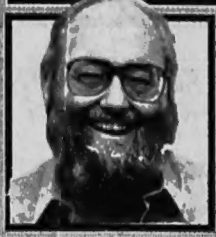

It was revealed last week that John Wilson of Haliburton was the winner of the local playoff hockey pool. Don Lloyd, also of Haliburton, came in second out of a total of 160 entrants. It all goes to prove that these two fellows really know their hockey.

Did you know that Canadians produce more garbage than any other nation — two kilograms per person every day. That's more than 18 billion kilograms of garbage a year!

POINTS OF VIEW

A newsman misses the flood

I WAS ON MY WAY down to Toronto Wednesday before last when I caught the word 'Haliburton' on a radio newscast. I hadn't been paying close attention, and my mind had to attempt to reconstruct details of the flood story from what I had heard in the background.

I don't really know how much of the details I picked up from that first report, but my initial reaction was a vague panic that something big was happening, and I wasn't there to report on it. It took me a while to calm down and realize that it didn't matter the way it had in past years.

As many readers know, I ran a news bureau in Haliburton, reporting to CHAY Radio, CKCO-TV, and The Toronto Star for the past four or five years. I originally got involved because I was so frustrated by the lack of exposure our area gets in the media.

Even when the area did get coverage, it was quite evident that most people in the Toronto media had no idea where Haliburton was. It was usually located as so many miles from Bracebridge, or confused as part of 'The Kawarthas.'

While I have never liked to hear the sound of my voice, I worked on my delivery until I could make an acceptable radio report. TV was simple for written copy only, and for bigger events I could call on Gar Lewis and his camera for coverage.

The Star was a little different, because it had to be either a fairly big local story — or involve people from the Metro Toronto area to rate ink. (I can remember calling in with a bad traffic accident. The newsroom asked: How many and where from?)

I got to meet a lot of people in the area I might not have known otherwise through working on the news stories, and many of them tipped me to interesting items. I also got a great deal of help from officers at the Minden OPP detachment.

I guess 1986 was the peak year for outside attention to newsworthy problems in this area. In June we had the tornado up Carnarvon way, and late in August, the fire on the main street in town.

It seems to be tough to get the weather people to designate anything a tornado anymore. They waffled over the one a week ago, and wouldn't even pay attention to the one that severely damaged trees on my property and many others in the Donald area last year.

But there was no question it was the real thing that carried cottages right across the lake in '86. Len Pizzey and I went in The Echo van to check conflicting reports that Camps Towhee or White Pine had been hit (it was both), and there was more destruction to see further up the line.

I ended up breaking the story on radio and TV from Ron Bacon's roofless home on 118. His phone worked, even if mine didn't!

The Star got a more detailed report later, after a visit to Boshkung and Beech Lakes, where some 100 cottages were damaged. I can still remember stepping on thawed beef patties from someone's freezer...

My reports became part of larger weather story in the Star, but I did get a byline for coverage of the main street fire, when Stedman's and its neighbors went up in smoke that August.

Oddly, this was a more difficult experience, I guess because I found it too emotionally involving to truly take the detached viewpoint that a proper newswriter should.

A very minor injury to my right arm and shoulder led to a tendon problem that has kept me off snowmobiles for the past three seasons.

With this in mind, we decided to take an extended vacation last winter, and with some regret (and some relief), I closed the bureau. I couldn't leave my media clients without a source of news while we were away.

Haliburton got coverage while I worked at it, but I'm afraid it didn't change things much. Global TV still reports weather 'for Muskoka and the Kawarthas' like we don't exist. A story a week ago in the Star on the inventor of a new water intake device refers to his 'family cottage on Kushog Lake near Peterborough.'

It makes you wonder what it's going to take to put Haliburton on the map in a way that the big city media really know where we are.

Meantime, I've been here for the wind and the fire but I missed the flood. Guess I'll just have to wait writers for the plague...

Sandwiching in counselling

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

LIFE IS AMAZING! It really is. Listen to this: In the last few weeks I have counselled a strange assortment of folks. Let me give you some examples.

There was the Dean of Students, Ph.D. from a large western university. He wanted to have lunch. (That means we both pay.) No sooner had we settled down to salmon on whole wheat than he started telling me about being 41 years old, very happy in his work but feeling called to the ministry of Word and Sacrament. This same call had actually been bugging him for years. "What should I do?" he asked, as coffee and dessert came. "Put up or shut up!" I replied in my pastoral tone. He went away thanking me for my time and help.

Then there was the guy who has been nominated for a very senior position in his ecclesiastical system. He drove down from Toronto twice. I spent two hours with him each time, as he sorted out his place in things, his gift and talents, the state of his particular denomination and whether he can stand the gaff. He paid for the first lunch. I paid for the second. He was thankful and helped after each visit. His mind and direction were more clear. He wants me around when the election is over, win or lose, to help him sort it out spiritually and emotionally. I promised to be there whether he became a bishop or not.

There was also the nuclear scientist, Ph.D., 38 years old, single, devoted to medical research — micro-biotics or something like that. She flew in from the east coast. We talked until the sun set. She decided to leave it all and do what she really wanted to do for a long time: study theology, become a priest.

A minister-poet comes. He has 'retired' twice in order to write plays. We talk now because the church still needs and wants him full time. What to do? Thankful, he sent me flowers!

A university professor, with years of devoted teaching, over sweat 'n sour chicken balls and stir fried veggies, lays out the sickening history of political systems that have finally worn him out. He is in his mid forties. He decides to go north and become a priest. He is thankful. I pay for my own lunch.

Kids come in too. They take a course in religious studies. It excites them. They want to become full-time religious. "Go live!" I advise. "See me in a couple of years." They ignore the advice, thank me for listening and sign up for Medieval studies. They are fun too.

And there was the young minister with three kids, leaving her minister husband in Quebec, trying to decide whether to go back to physio-therapy for a time and raise her kids alone, or stay in the church. We prayed together about it. She decided, and with jaw set, thanked me and left.

It goes on and on. People come to talk about decisions they must make, career choices and so on. I'm good at helping and listening and asking the right questions.

When I told Betty about all of these folks and others, she laughed right out loud and said "That will make a good article for The Echo."

It will because she knows, you see, that I still don't know what to do when I grow up!

We're just doing our job

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

THE CLIMB HAS BEEN SLOW, and often arduous. Three years ago, The Echo was judged as being among the top third of Canadian community newspapers in our circulation category. This was the first time we had even figured in the calculations and were quite proud of the little ribbon on the masthead.

The next year we placed second. We were ecstatic and dared not to hold our breath for the results of the next year's results. But then we came in first!

This provided us with a real dilemma: There was no place to go but down. And while the climb may be difficult, accepting a fall would be even harder.

So we were rather caught off guard when we received the Canadian Community Newspaper Association's preliminary awards listing. There on the fourth page, under the heading of Best All Round Newspaper was The Echo. Again! (For your interest, some of the other top places were papers from Winchester, Ont., Liverpool, Nova Scotia, and Eganville, Kapuskasing, Gananoque and Strathroy, all from Ontario. The Eganville Leader is a paper I greatly admire and respect.)

The new dilemma I face is how to write about how proud we are without sounding smug. We think we have a special newspaper, but then so too do staff on other newspapers. There's no doubt there are many communities being well served.

Our strengths, we believe, are a sense of responsibility to our communities and a commitment to quality.

People in small towns deserve to have more than a "rag" or a "five-minute-read" reflect their lives. Good writers don't have to live in the city and interesting things do happen north of the Greater Toronto Area. Little things can become important, too. To an eight-year-old girl, "flying up" from Brownies to Guides is as big an event — probably bigger — as a municipal election. We strive to make The Echo a paper for everyone.

The Echo also doesn't want to stand still. Not complacent, we are always looking for ways to make a better newspaper — better coverage of events, better pictures, better lay-out, more imaginative advertising. What can we do that we've never done before? What can we change to improve ourselves?

We're not a newspaper unto itself, however. We don't work to produce the best newspaper we can just to please ourselves. Our readers and advertisers are an integral part of what makes The Echo what it is. Without their support, co-operation and encouragement, we might as well just pack up shop.

Yet to borrow from a religious philosophy, instead of patting ourselves on the back, I think we should be saying "The Echo is nothing more than it ought to be." If we do a good job writing about the news and people of our community, isn't that just what all newspapers are supposed to do?

When life is bugging you

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

WHAT AM I DOING HERE? he thought to himself, trying in vain to escape the black flies and mosquitoes. He had an early appointment that morning and had barely made it on time, having to practically run directly from the shower to his car with time for little more than coffee in between. The bugs must have smelled him coming because the minute he set foot outside his vehicle, they surrounded him. It's difficult to smile and talk to people when you're under attack. That fragrant soap and shampoo he had doused himself with earlier drew them like a magnet. He could feel them crawling through his hair and gnawing on every exposed piece of skin.

Although going inside offered a brief respite from the little cannibals, it was disconcerting to feel his own warm blood trickling down the side of his face and see the look of horror on his clients' faces. "It's alright," he assured them, smiling gamely.

The first appointment of the day completed, he sped along the highway towards the next one, his body still twitching from the bug bites. Unfortunately a few of the black flies had snuck into his car when the door was open and once again he felt them crawling and gnawing away at his hairline. At that particular moment, the concrete and congestion of the city seemed a preferable environment to the lakes and bush that surrounded him.

Four hours later, he was heading home, tired, itchy and looking forward to kicking off his shoes and shaking the memory of being eaten alive. A shape on the side of the road caught his eye and he saw a black bear turn and sprint back into the trees. Even a bear can only stand the bugs so long before seeking open space and a chance of a breeze. He remembered that at his last appointment the people had told him he had just missed seeing a moose.

He rounded a curve and there up ahead was a young deer. Slowing down he waited to see what it would do, glad for this chance at a close look. The deer stood there, its legs slightly spread, ears twitching away at the insects, unsure of what direction to go.

He felt better now. Misery loves company and he knew that if the bugs were bad enough to drive the animals out onto the road, they really were bad that day. It wasn't just a matter of getting soft in his old age and losing tolerance for the discomforts of northern living. Besides, sight of the animals was always a pleasant reminder of why he really had chosen this lifestyle over the bug-free city.

They had finished supper and were sitting out on the screened porch. A wind had started, blowing the maples and pines into a churning sea of green billows. The breeze was fresh with a hint of rain in the air. The phone rang. His daughter grabbed it then told him it was for him. Just as he was picking up the receiver, the hydro went off. It was no problem, the windows still allowing more than enough light into the room and he carried on the conversation as though nothing had happened. Then he remembered he had a few phone calls to make and decided to do it while there was still plenty of light, just in case the hydro stayed off longer than the usual minute or two.

Ah but life is full of surprises. One phone call led to another and then another. One person had to call him back and on it went. The hydro did not come on, the wind still whipping the trees outside and an hour later the house's interior had darkened considerably. His wife lit candles and he made a mental note to buy coal oil the next day. They had three coal oil lamps in the house but only one had oil and that was barely a dribble. By now he was looking up phone numbers and retrieving notes from his briefcase by flashlight. His daughter couldn't finish typing her school assignment on the electric typewriter and between phone calls he warned everyone not to flush the toilet. The power had now been off for hours.

The phone finally silent, he walked into the living room, trying not to bump into furniture or trip over the dog. The glow of candles and the solitary coal oil lamp cast a pleasant softness over the room. His daughter had dug out the old manual typewriter.

Plant a seed, grow a salad

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

ABOUT THE FIFTH PERSON came up to me the other day to let me know, "Well, I planted my garden today."

It boggles my mind to think that there are people out there who get up one morning, start tilling the soil, and before the evening meal, have the whole plot planted from asparagus to zucchini, and the tools put away. The whole thing!

Where's the fun, the challenge, the meditations? Now, I've been planting seeds since Earthday (that's April 22) and I'm only just getting around to corn and tomatoes. I suppose I do get a little excessive. In fact, let's face it. If there were a group of S.P.A.s in Haliburton, (Seed Planters Anonymous), I'd have to walk right up to the podium and confess, "My name is Ginnie and I'm a compulsive seed planter."

It's not even that I was a frustrated mudpie maker as a child. More likely, it was all those adult years in the city, living on 2' by 4' lots with barely enough room to stick in one lonely tomato plant.

Ah... but now I'm here on good old Tonarosa Farms North with acres of field. Every year the garden creeps a little farther across them. There's something about digging in the dirt and crumbling it in my hands. I'm like an ant who's found an opened sugar bowl. Now, every week two grown men spend hours beating back the quack with tillers and shovels, dig trenches and help raise beds to keep ahead of my relentless planting. Every morning I search the beds for signs of green. Each tiny, sprouting leaf is my accomplishment. The first garden salad is my reward. (You'd think I hadn't had any help!)

Truth is, I get lots of help. And advice. Some of it I even ask for. The first time I planted my garden, the guys who were building our house asked me if I didn't have a hoe. I was spending hours on my hands and knees with a three pronged digger, pulling out quack grass. Sure I had a hoe, but I happened to like being on my hands and knees in dirt much more than scrubbing kitchen floors. Besides, at that time, I didn't have any to scrub.

See, it's the methodical routine. The slow down and dig in that turns me on. It's probably a good thing we don't live in California. Can you imagine being able to plant seeds all year round?

Kids do diamond dance as baseball season starts

Haliburton's Minor Softball League is off and batting.

League President Nancy Brink expected a big turnout, based on the number of registration forms she had received by last Wednesday afternoon. But the crowd that turned out Wednesday night at the J.D. Hodgson ball diamonds even surprised her. Over 130 eager ballplayers, ages 4 to 16 showed up.

But this represents problems for Ms. Brink who is desperately seeking help in organizing and coaching. "My life's been ball, so I like to pass it onto the kids," she says. Leaning on a two inch thick stack of registration forms, she adds that much as she enjoys it, she can't continue without cooperation from parents.

The league is designed strictly as good, (no guarantees of cleanliness!), safe fun. Safety is her main concern, says Ms. Brink, adding that the $5 registration fee provides players with a caps, t-shirts, and use of high quality equipment. Helmets with safety straps done up are a necessity for softball players, and no jewellery is allowed.

Best of all, "Everybody gets to play."

and was peering at the keys in the semi-darkness. "Dad," she asked, "how do people stand it in the old days, without hydro? They had no lights, no TV, no VCR. It must have been awful!"

"It wasn't so bad. They had coal oil lamps, only more of them than we do," he told her. "There was lots to do without TV. People would read, play cards and alk. And they went to bed earlier because they got up earlier in the morning. They managed fine, just like we are right now."

They did in fact go to bed earlier that night. The hydro never did come back on and a phone call to the hydro office told them the wind had blown several trees onto power lines and it would be hours until the situation was remedied. They used the water left in the tea kettle to brush their teeth. The lake was just across the road but no one wanted to venture outside with the bugs lying in wait.

All things considered, he should have gone to bed tense from a frustrating day of bug bites and fumbling in the dark. But he didn't. He had seen a bear and a deer on the road. He had enjoyed the silence of a candle-lit evening. And before retiring he had sat out on the screened porch and listened to the wind in the trees. Not a light showed across the lake but he knew people were there. Maybe, he mused to himself, maybe they're doing the same thing as I am, picking out what they can in the dark night landscape and marvelling that with the lights out, it isn't nearly as dark as I thought it would be.

Koolers clean up tourney

The Haliburton Koolers, a mixed lob ball tournament team, captured the A division championship at the third annual Labatts/Bancroft Legion three pitch tournament. The tournament, held last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, drew 14 teams from North Hastings County and two teams from Haliburton County (Haliburton and Cardiff).

The Koolers, sparked by the aggressive, out-of-park hitting by Tim Chambers, Jeff Whitfield, Bob Johnston and Steve Barker, accumulated 79 runs in four games. In addition, strong, almost error-free defensive play by the entire Koolers team held the opposition to a total of 18 runs in the four games. Tim Chambers' consistently accurate pitching and ability to clear the fence when at bat earned him the most valuable player award.

The Koolers are especially proud of their win, since despite all the opposition teams adhering to the minimum requirement rule of three women on the field and in the batting order, the Koolers fielded four women and included six women in the 12 position batting order. Also proud of the Koolers' accomplishment are the four businesses which co-sponsored the Koolers uniforms. Elstone Motors, Emmerson Lumber, Eric's Tree Removal and MDS Laboratories are responsible for the Koolers being the best dressed team in the tournament.

The Koolers team members include Bob Johnston, Tim Chambers, Janice Chambers, Anne Emmerson, Steve Barker, Les Feero, Carol Feero, Jeff Whitfield, Jean Currie, Darlene Wilcox, Deeno Pearsell and Charlene Pearsell. The Koolers plan to participate in several more tournaments in the area this summer.

Ladies softball starts up

Last week, the Haliburton County Ladies Softball League began its 1990 season. In Monday's very close game, West Guilford beat Rockcliffe by a score of 12 to 10. Minden General Lee whopped Haliburton on Tuesday night: the score of that game was 24 to 5. West Guilford also took Haliburton in five innings at 33 to 8.

This past Monday night, Haliburton lost to West Guilford by 10 runs: 18 to 8 was the score. Minden General Lee lost to Rockcliffe, in a 22 to 3 run game.

anywhere. Why do we have zoning bylaws? Why is their a bylaw officer? Where has this officer been throughout the development of this saw mill?

It is shameful that Monmouth council would overlook this activity with no consideration for their residents. Reeve Tallman's request for further information about forestry use is a cop-out. The reeve's further suggestion that taxpayers negotiate with the bylaw breaker indicates a lack of fortitude.

The noisy Wilberforce woodcutter, as much as anyone else, is aware of the uses permitted within the zones. It is the responsibility of each township to enforce where a woodcutter can stretch the interpretation of forestry use.

Can the bylaw enforcement officer not hear the noisy Wilberforce woodcutter. It would appear someone is not doing their job.

Cardiff straight talk?

To the Editor:

On May 2, the Cardiff council troika of Reeve Bradley, Deputy Reeve Murphy and Councillor Peters journeyed to Toronto (at taxpayers' expense?) so that Reeve Bradley could tell the Eels Lake Cottagers Association (ELCA) general meeting of the fine job council is doing on their behalf. For example, Cardiff's fledgling industrial park is clearly a success with a factor employing 60 people to be established and many other businesses requesting entry. The one glum disclosure by Reeve Bradley was that plans for the senior citizens complex had collapsed. To the relief of everyone it turned out that this failure was the result of the Ontario government not coming through with the necessary financing. If you have heard that the seniors complex fell through because of inadequate planning by Cardiff council, forget it. Untrue! Just ask Reeve Bradley. Ever the gracious guest, the reeve announced the gift of two fire pumps for Eels Lake — three years late but nevertheless welcome.

The most significant disclosure was made in veiled speech. It is now clear that the pact by which Reeve Bradley and Deputy Reeve Murphy agreed to do everything in their power to have the township take over the Ministry of Natural Resources Eels Lake forest access road, in exchange for the support of ELCA during the municipal election of '88, is about to bear fruit. At least the ELCA executive think so.

Despite the Cardiff Official Plan, which sets stringent conditions for the assumption of roads; the fact that only one Eels Lake property owner is willing to pay for the necessary upgrading of the Eels Lake Road; the fact that the same council members previously opposed assuming the road on the cottagers' terms; the fact that the precedent which would be established portends frightful tax increases; despite all these things, the Cardiff council leadership seems bent on a course of action contrary to the interests of 95 per cent of Cardiff taxpayers, including the majority of Eels Lake cottagers.

It's time for full disclosure; time for straight speaking by the leaders of Cardiff Township council. Will they do it?

Garth Clark

To the Editor:

What do Alfred Armstrong, Martha Perkins, Michael Collins, Elderhostel and the McGuffins have in common? The answer is "words".

My earliest memories of being read at are not of stories such as 'Jack and The Beanstock' but of Westerns, as my dad would read chapters of Zane Grey novels at bedtime, in the distant days before hydro, radio and t.v.

Martha's excellent Section III of last week's Echo is an achievement she probably didn't dream of in her own school years which she used to reminisce of in earlier columns, after her arrival in Haliburton.

In a 'bridge' acquaintance of Michael Collins, for whom the game is also a late interest, but due to his concentrated reading, studying and following of the bridge circuit, 'Mike' has acquired a greater understanding of the game than those of us who are inclined to drift along in our Culbertson-Goren modes.

Velma and I have just returned to Haliburton for our summer in the sun, and also from some Elderhosteling on the British Isles. During our week at Bangor University in beautiful North Wales, I purchased a book "The Mabinogion", a fascinating translation of eleven ancient Celtic and medieval European tales: our instructor was a true Welshman in words, music and beliefs. Incidentally, there were 37 'students' on this 3-week Elderhostel course, 17 Canadians from Quebec west to Vancouver, and 20 Americans from coast to coast—we melded well.

The second week at Bellinter House, 30 miles north of Dublin was filled with lectures and tours of Ireland's ancient history, with a visit to view "The Book of Kells" at Victoria University in Dublin where most of the film "Educating Rita" was taken. At Alsager College in the English midlands we studied modern British theatre and heard words from the 'New Vic' a true theatre in-the-round in Stoke-on-Trent, and the 'Library' in Manchester.

On our return flight, because of my bad ear, I drew the centre aisle seat while Velma fortuitously sat beside a vivacious Joanie McGuffin and her hushy husband Gary, who as we approached Canada, was glued to the window identifying Newfoundland and other familiar territory. Thanks to CBC morning radio, a year or two or three ago, I recognized the McGuffin name, as Joanie used to phone in from some remote part of Canada on their canoe-bicycle trek across this great country. They were returning from England and a publicity tour for their book "Behold Our Canada", but we were invited to a more immediate event. There is to be a photographic exhibition of their Canadian adventures in Bracebridge from June 3rd to July 15th at the Muskoka Arts & Craft Chapel Gallery.

The word "word(s)" has about 11 definitions in my F&W dictionary and I guess you could say our library is full of them, even if some of our homes are not. Michael Collins is quoted as saying "children become, in essence, the atmosphere their parents present to them". Would you believe that of the voluntary members of a Library Committee I was a part of for a year or two, only two of us held a library card?

Bruce Armstrong,
Haliburton.

Unique gatherings

To the Editor:

I would like to congratulate Wendy Bateman and the Rails' End Gallery for presenting "Gatherings", a most unique creation that allows visitor/participants to experience both the depth of damage we humans have inflicted on this Earth, and some possibilities for change and healing. In a very simple and powerful way, we are encouraged to share our insights and work together toward living responsibly on this planet.

I congratulate also the Haliburton Board of Education and the staff involved who have brought the children to experience the presentation and share their ideas. In their sense of wonder and awe, the children are acutely aware of the interconnectedness of all things, and I trust they will help us return to living in balance—especially when we offer them learning opportunities such as this show.

Sincerely,
Caroline Bishop,
R.R. 1 Haliburton

Response on recycling

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis in response to his letter concerning her disappointment that recycling isn't available in the township.

Dear Mr. Davis,

Your snide and fallacious response to my query regarding recycling in Stanhope deserves a reply.

I did not invent the idea of recycling in Stanhope. During my six years as a tax-paying resident of Stanhope, your council publicly suggested the possibility of recycling. I felt proud to be in one of the first townships in the county to have suggested it. But since that time, other townships have undertaken recycling projects while Stanhope remained inactive. Even last year amidst the hoopla over dwindling landfill space, Stanhope erected gates and hired attendants to help ameliorate the problem but did not implement recycling. This year, as out-of-township residents, we purchased a permit to allow us access to Stanhope's landfill services which we use for materials that would otherwise have to be taken to Ingoldsby. It was upon noting recently that there were still not recycling bins at Stanhope, and due to my conviction that recycling is a necessity in this age of dwindling and wasted natural resources, that I felt the issue should be openly discussed. I feel that waiting for the county's Waste Management Master Plan is an excuse for inertia.

Your concern about the lack of a market for recyclables is unfounded. The price of recyclable cans is good and according to the Recycling Council of Ontario, there is an income from sorted, clear glass. Newsprint is a cost at present, though this should change by October 1990, when the Atlantic Paper Company implements the appropriate technology. Three or four other paper companies are preparing to use recycled paper. The market for newsprint is poor right now but it can only get better, according to Ministry of the Environment.

You stated that five per cent of our solid waste is recyclable. I could not find anyone to back up this figure, other than to state it must include was from households and industries. For households only the amount is between 25 and 60 per cent, with the majority of it being newspaper and composting materials, says the MOE. The proportion of waste generated can be reduced significantly by encouraging people to compost and by implementing the other three Rs of recycling—reduction, reuse and recovery.

Though adamant Stanhope's reason for not recycling is not cost, it is surprising you mentioned Durham region's recycling program where the cost was 10 times more than the income generated. However, part of the reason for the vast expenditure might have been poor planning and management rather than the folly of recycling.

Recycling is not an income-generating undertaking, nor is it guaranteed to pay for itself. Instead, it is a way to extend the life of landfill sites, to use valuable materials that would otherwise be garbage, and to reduce our consumption of the earth's resources.

I apologize for rippling the waters, Mr. Davis, and I can appreciate your concerns. My point is that by not setting up a recycling bin in Stanhope you deny the residents, both permanent and seasonal (many of whom already participate in recycling in their own communities), the chance to help save and re-utilize resources. We know the cost is only $5,000 per year even without any financial assistance. The sad fact is, however, that Stanhope still hasn't resolved whether or not recycling is even a logical alternative.

Thank you for responding to my initial concerns.

Yours truly,
Shirley McCormick,

Pet death and heartache

To the Editor:

This letter is in regards to the hundreds of pet lovers who have had their animals killed on the road by hit-and-run drivers.

Last Wednesday, May 23, between 8pm and 9:30pm our beloved pet was killed on Highway 121 near Jay Lake Trailer Park. At first, when my husband told me, I couldn't believe it, and the I knew it was true. Feelings of guilt, betrayal and heartache was what I felt, a feeling that part of our family was suddenly gone, never to come back into our lives.

I also felt that I must take some kind of revenge for her, but knew I couldn't bring her back to life. I feel that some kind of penalty or fine should be given to people who just hit pets and leave them to die. We wouldn't have known if we hadn't made a trip to town. When we found out cat Abigail her neck was broken. I wish I could know who did it and how they feel. I feel that people who do things like that, with no concern for the animal or human beings, are really not human beings inside at all.

Driver kills deer

To the Editor:

On Friday May the 11th I had an experience that will always affect me.

I hit a deer on the county road.

I have lived in the Haliburton area for the last three winters. I often encounter deer on the road, especially in the winter. I often stop to watch them and marvel at their size and freedom.

But Friday was to be different. I was driving home along County Road 14. From the left a deer suddenly appeared. It was moving so fast that I barely had time to move the steering wheel to the right as it jerked its head to the left. I could not stop the car fast enough to miss it. Suddenly it was over. I pulled my car over to the side of the road. My first

Municipality of Dysart et al

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING TO CONSIDER A PROPOSED LOT LEVY FEE PURSUANT TO SECTION 50 (5) OF THE PLANNING ACT, 1983 AS AMENDED

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Municipality of Dysart et al will consider adopting a "Lot Levy" policy pursuant to Section 50 (5) of the Planning Act, 1983 as amended. This section of the Planning Act allows municipalities to impose a levy on new development in the Municipality. The purpose of a lot levy policy is to establish a system for the collection of sufficient funds as a condition of development so that the need for services and facilities required by new development is paid for by new development instead of placing an unfair burden on existing development which has already funded existing services and facilities. Lot levies are not intended to solely fund improvements to services and facilities which are considered inadequate for the present population.

A public meeting will be held to consider the concept of lot levies on Monday, June 25, 1990 at 7:00 p.m. in the auditorium of the Dysart Community Centre & Arena. All interested persons are invited to attend this meeting. Written or verbal comments will be considered by a Committee of Council.

Please direct questions to the undersigned during regular office hours.

DATED at the Township of Dysart this 31st day of May, 1990.

Planning Administrator

Friday, June 8, 1990, from 3:00 to 5:00 and 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. at the Municipal Office in Cardiff.

Home & Vacation SHOW

Annual show set to begin this Friday

SUMMER is almost upon us, and in Haliburton, that means it's time for the annual Home and Vacation Show. This popular three day event has been drawing crowds to the Dysart arena and the Haliburton Curling Club for more than a decade. In fact, this year's edition of the Home Show is the 12th annual event, and organizers are optimistic it will be as big a success as any that have preceded it.

Whether you're building a new home or planning renovations, considering the purchase of a new boat or motor or a new set of wheels for those summer escapes, you'll find a great deal to keep you busy at the Home Show.

Close to 90 businesses and services have purchased booths at the home show, and their representatives will be on hand throughout the weekend to answer your questions and explain their products and expertise to you.

One of the most enjoyable aspects of the Home Show is the opportunity to stop a while and chat with the owners and operators of local businesses, and to greet your neighbours who will also be taking in the show. The atmosphere is friendly and relaxed, and the hard sell, so characteristic of some exhibitions, is pleasingly absent from the Haliburton show.

The show opens Friday, June 8 at noon and continues right through to Sunday afternoon.

A wide variety of goods will be on display throughout the weekend

MAKING THE WISEST USE OF YOUR ELECTRICITY.

HERE'S WHAT YOU CAN DO.

Fix those dripping taps

A simple washer will eliminate an annoying drip - and save money. At only one drop a second, you can waste many gallons of hot water a month... right down the drain.

Save laundry for a full load

Don't use the washer and dryer for a few items - wait until you have a full load. Small items waste hot water and electricity on the dryer.

Use a "low flow" shower head

You can still enjoy a nice hot shower like always - but you save hot water. Most hardware stores stock them.

Insulate and weatherstrip

Keep the heat inside... where it belongs. Make sure your home is adequately insulated and that all windows and doors have good, efficient weatherstripping.

Set back your thermostat

Don't use more heat than you need. And at night, when you retire, or when you're away from home for a while, set back the thermostat a few degrees. You'll sleep just as well and you'll save money.

HERE'S WHAT WE CAN DO FOR YOU.

We can survey your home's energy efficiency

Call and ask one of our energy advisors to do a survey of your house. It's a free service to our customers. They'll look at your insulation, appliances and heating system and give you a full report on how well your home is doing and what it needs to save you money. Simply give us a call and make an appointment at your convenience.

Hours are noon to 10pm Friday, 10am to 9pm on Saturday, and 10am to 4pm on Sunday. Admission is free.

A number of special activities will be featured at this year's Home Show. On Friday night at 7pm the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band will send the strains of their Scottish music soaring into the rafters of the arena, and having set the tone, they'll be followed by an exhibition of Highland dancing, starting at 7:30pm.

Also on Friday night, at 8:30, the first of three fashions shows will be presented. WindSurFinn begins the trio of shows at the Curling Club with their popular lines of exquisite casual clothes.

On Saturday afternoon at 1:30, The Village Shoppe will stage a fashion show featuring the latest in summer clothing and accessories for women. And on Saturday night at 8pm, WindSurFinn will be back for an encore with more of their country casual lines for men and women.

Another attraction at this year's Home Show is the Haliburton Model Railway club, which will display its impressive layout of models, rolling through a miniature Highlands landscape.

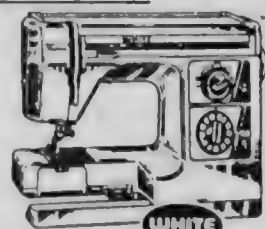

And Hickey The Clown will be on hand at various times through the weekend to keep children as well as adults amused.

Arena and Curling Club will be filled to capacity with booths concern was for the deer.

I opened the driver's door but found I had great difficulty getting out of my car. Even though it was a full moon I was not able to ascertain all the damage to my car so I went in search of the deer. A short distance down the road I located it. It was on the opposite shoulder. There was no movement. I turned around and walked back to my car. At midnight what was I to do? There was no other vehicle on the road so I proceeded to drive home. As soon as I was home I called the O.P.P. to report the accident.

Officer Buchanan and his partner came out that night. The deer was gone and they were unable to locate the scene of the accident. They surveyed the damage to my vehicle and took a statement. I was advised that this was the second one that night.

After 9 a.m., I called Curry Motors to have the damage assessed. Len Salvatori said that if I came in at 11 a.m., they would make temporary repairs to the car that morning.

I then called my insurance agent, Betty Hodgson of Frost Insurance. I explained what happened. She said what I was going to do was fine and that Curry Motors would drop off the estimate for repairs next week.

What are you supposed to do in the same circumstances? I realize that I was not supposed to leave the scene of the accident. But would it have been safe for me to wait to the side of the road until someone came along? With all the recent disappearances it is no safe to be stranded by the highway.

Unfortunately, I have a job that involves shift work. When I drive at night I drive slowly and cautiously. I feel there was no way to avoid hitting this deer. I hope that it does not happen again.

I am truly amazed by the speed this was dealt with and would like to thank the people involved publicly.

What a great place to live!

Not necessarily evil

prised of sandy soil, which allows water to simply run-off, while containing enough moisture to bond the soil together.

Twenty-six different ways of treating stands and six different methods of cutting trees have evolved in pursuit of successful silviculture, Hynard says. He describes the two prevalent schools of thought about forestry. Whenever forestry emerges as a contentious issue, a group emerges that wants it stopped. The other viewpoint is that it is a necessary evil: although forestry is not good, its by-products — paper, wooden floors and furniture — are highly desirable.

Hynard holds a viewpoint somewhere between these two. With proper management, he says, our forests can be sustained to ensure both the continuing presence of natural havens, and the prosperous future of the forestry industry. "We can have it all and eat it too," he says.

A visit to a few selection cuts demonstrated some harvesting can be done while still maintaining, to some degree, the beauty of the forest. Selection cuts involve taking some trees, but leaving others to mature. One selection cut was similar in appearance to a forest where older trees have simply fallen down; the other, more recent, was noticeable but not altogether disagreeable.

Hynard admits there is no way of disguising the ugliness of a new clear-cut. But on the drive to the burn site, he stopped to ask, "How did you like the clear-cut?" Unnoticed by the passenger, the truck had just passed a three-year-old clear-cut. A new bush, verdant and healthy albeit shorter, is rapidly replacing one which may now exist as countless diningroom tables.

LEAN, GRUBBY SOLDIERS open their rations for a meal. Behind a wire fence, skeletal civilians watch as the army men hungrily consume the meager contents of the tins. When the containers are thrown over the fence, the famished civilians cluster about, frantically wiping the cans with their fingers and licking off any remnants.

Marshall Leighton remembers this scene occurring in Utrecht, Holland, after the Canadians liberated the country in April, 1945. He was one of the Canadian soldiers who fought the Germans; Holland had been occupied by the Nazis for five years.

He is not alone in his memories. The Leightons have a book entitled "The End of five years of terror in Holland." "Dear Marshall and Helen," reads the inscription. "Thank you for liberating our country, for bringing us peace and freedom to live and to bring up our children."

It is signed by Tineke and Aart-Willem Udo-van Helden, the Dutch couple with whom the Leightons stayed a month ago. The Leightons went to take part in the "Thank You Canada" celebration held in Holland every five years. This represented the 45th anniversary of the liberation of Holland.

Steps to liberation

An understanding of events leading up to the liberation makes the gratitude of the Dutch people more comprehensible.

Mr. Leighton arrived in Normandy on D-Day, June 6, 1944. He was a corporal with the 17th Duke of York Royal Canadian Hussars (7th Canadian Reconnaissance Regiment). After landing at Berniere-sur-Mer, the troop moved up through France and Belgium. Travelling in armoured cars, they arrived at the Waal River near the Belgium/Holland border. "The Germans were on one side and we were on the other," says Mr. Leighton.

For the rest of the winter the Canadians remained in a holding position. There were some skirmishes; the Germans would send troops across and the Canadians would shell them. But the front was generally quiet. Mr. Leighton recalls Christmas Eve: "We could hear the Germans on the other side singing Silent Night."

Nonetheless, no one was deceived. "You never knew when things were going to erupt," Mr. Leighton says.

One such eruption was over the bridge at Nijmegen. It was the only remaining bridge which could take heavy equipment, and the Canadians worked day and night to keep it in one piece. Anything in the river moving towards the bridge was blown up by the Canadians, who feared German attempts to destroy it with a strategically planted bomb. A few German bombs damaged the bridge, but "never enough to stop us from going over," says Mr. Leighton.

In late March, the Canadians invaded Holland. "This was the big attack. We were fighting the whole way," Mr. Leighton recalls, "and it was pretty heavy fighting too."

His troop consisted of five armoured cars, a flame thrower, and an infantry assault troop. And they were quite literally on the front line: their goal was to find out where German troops were and send this information back to the oncoming Canadian troops.

Move North Young Families!

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK

Staff Reporter

NOT LONG AFTER Greg and Catherine Johnson moved to Haliburton from St. Catharines, they were faced with a situation which would come to symbolize their happy transition from city-dwellers to country folk.

Driving home one particularly cold day last winter, the Johnsons hit a nasty stretch of road and went into the ditch. Being new to the area, they didn't know how long they would have to wait before someone would stop and help them — or if anyone would stop at all.

It didn't take long for them to find out.

"About five people stopped and asked us if we wanted help," says Mr. Johnson. "Everyone was so willing to help here — someone even drove us right back to the house."

Contrast this scene with one experienced by Mrs. Johnson when her car went off the road in St. Catharines, and you will understand their happy amazement at being treated so well up here.

"It was incredible," she says. "People watched as I went off the road . . . and nobody stopped. I had to hitch-hike back to town. It's totally different up here."

"About five people stopped and asked us if we wanted help..."

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are just two of the young couples escaping the indifference and coldness of larger cities for a more humane lifestyle in Haliburton.

The Johnsons moved here from St. Catharines last November "to get away from the pollutants," says Mrs. Johnson. "The water and air pollution in St. Catharines is so bad. The statistics for people getting cancer there was so high we felt we just had to move."

They decided on Haliburton after carefully checking out other small-town options. "We decided on Haliburton because it's not a typical northern Ontario village," says Mr. Johnson. "It's got a nice attitude — it doesn't have that segregated feeling that you see in other towns. Plus we didn't want to be that far from Bancroft."

Mrs. Johnson is an accountant who works out of her home, and the regional office for the company she works for is located in Bancroft. Mr. Johnson also works for their one-family enterprise, doing public relations and drumming up business.

Although there are no statistics out yet to prove it, many people have noticed that Haliburton is experiencing a mini population boom as major popula-

Going deaf with Def Leppard:

Loud rock music gets the rap from safety council

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK

Staff Reporter

IT'S AFTER NINE O'CLOCK in the evening and the Blind Whitey Somers Band have just strapped on their guitars and are cranking out a loud George Thorogood tune to their captive audience at Minden's Dominion Hotel.

Catherine Jackson stands behind the bar, tapping her feet to the music. While she appears to be hearing fine, if you walked up to her and asked for a bottle of your favourite brand of neck oil, you'd probably have to ask her a couple of times before she'd get it right.

Jackson says she's losing her hearing, and she claims it's the result of working for so many years in loud bars.

"My hearing is so bad I have to read people's lips," she says. "It's not bad enough to wear hearing aids, but I mostly rely on sign language and lip-reading to get my orders right."

According to a study by two east coast audiologists who studied the noise levels in various Halifax bars, many had noise levels high enough to cause permanent hearing damage after one hour of exposure.

The two audiologists said the average sound levels in the 22 Halifax bars they monitored was 99.82 decibels. One hundred decibels is equivalent to the noise generated by a jet airplane taking off.

"It's pretty clear that this is a dangerous environment," said Marek Mieszkowski, one of the audiologists. "We figured the average patron spending about four hours in bars when the evening is planned this way. And then there are the people who work there regularly."

Jackson has been running the bar in the Dominion since she and her husband Bryan bought it last January, so getting away from all the bar noise could prove to be a problem for her.

"It's really a pain," she says. "Once I had a guy sitting at the table, and he was saying 'two Blue, two Blue,' but I couldn't hear him. I really have to get my hearing checked, but I have no time."

Besides working at the Dominion, she also works at Town and Country Travel in Haliburton. Scheduling a doctor's appointment is a bit of a problem for her.

Jackson says that the Dominion isn't very loud compared to other bars she's worked at, particularly Illusions in Oshawa, where she noticed a hearing problem developing.

"It was so loud," she says. "The doormen wore earplugs. 'You'd go home at night and hear ringing in your ears. Sometimes now I think I hear the phone ringing when it really isn't.'"

In Ontario, hearing impairment accounted for 15 per cent of the 7,335 claims for permanent disability in 1988.

More people at risk

"Our increasingly noisy environment is putting more and more people at risk," says Dr. Edgar Shaw, a researcher with the National Research Council.

According to Section 42 of the Ontario Health and Safety Act, the maximum decibel level during an eight-hour work day is 90 decibels. But that level is an average, so that even if the music peaks at 116 decibels — which is both the pain threshold, and the highest decibel level monitored in a Halifax bar by Mieszkowski — the lower valleys (when the band is taking a break, for instance) will bring that down to a respectable level.

A decibel is a unit of measurement which gauges the relative loudness of sound. One decibel is the smallest amount of change detectable by the human ear.

Ten decibels is the sound of a light whisper, 50 is the sound of a typewriter and 90 is the sound of heavy traffic and thunder.

Exposure to sound at 75 decibels — equivalent to the noise inside a running car — is considered safe. Any sound that exceeds 85 decibels — the noise made by a lawnmower or motorcycle — is considered dangerous.

According to a report issued by the Ontario Safety League, noise at or above that level can permanently damage the cochlea or the inner ear. Currently, one out of 10 Canadians suffers some form of hearing loss.

"What effect any loud noise has on the ear depends on how regularly you're subjected to it,"

Fast pace of city life drives families north to Highlands expensive centres like Toronto get more and more expensive and less attractive to live in — especially for younger couples who want to start families.

"There's definitely an increased number of people moving to these areas," says Jane Selbie, a senior project manager with the Haliburton County Employment Services Centre. "They're leaving the fast pace of the city, coming up to their cottages and staying here all year round."

According to a study prepared for MPP John Eakins titled "County Government in Ontario," Haliburton is just one of the many small communities expected to be hit by a major population explosion in the 1990s.

The study suggests that by the year 2006, Haliburton County will experience a population growth of about 20 per cent.

One Haliburton resident who's noticed the growing population trend in the county is Haliburton School of Fine Arts director Barb Bolin.

"Every year we see people coming out to the school and then eventually buying cottages," she says. "I've also seen quite a few people maintain their cottages year-round now."

While many people move from the city because of one particular reason — like the Johnsons, some are moving to Haliburton because they felt a subtle, growing need to come here.

Like Barrie Wood and Lorelyn Morgan. Their decision to leave Toronto wasn't as abrupt or for any one particular reason.

"It was certainly no one thing," says Wood, a former dancer who is now trying his hand at directing musicals. "We were just getting tired of the city life. It was things like riding my bike to work every night, and feeling like I was driving through a battle zone."

"The older I got, the more I thought about going back to my roots. And it suddenly became important for me to have a vegetable garden."

Wood is originally from Bedford, Quebec, a small town not far from Montreal. But he spent most of his adult years living in Montreal, New York and Toronto, working at a host of acting jobs. Morgan is Toronto-born, but was familiar with the county because she grew up as a cottager here.

Wood and Morgan found a house near Eagle Lake a year ago, and moved in last May.

"We looked-over many counties before we decided on settling here," says Wood. "We both felt that a small town like this was a better place to bring up a child than Toronto."

Wood and Morgan have one daughter, Maradyn, who is quickly getting used to country life.

"There's starting to be a deterioration in the quality of life in Toronto," says Wood, but also admits his distaste for the city is "an age thing."

"When you're 25 you want to be smack downtown, then as you get older you want to move further and further from the city."

And right now they're happy to be exactly the distance they want to be from the city — far enough not to be bothered with it, but close enough to use its conveniences when they're needed.

About any future plans to pack and move from the county, Wood has a blunt, blanket statement to cover that question.

"We don't want to move," he says; "unless it's to a convalescent home or a pine box."

"We don't want to move, unless it's to a convalescent home or a pine box."

Ravaged country greets Canadian liberators

Because their maps were meticulously detailed — even driveways and wells were located — Mr. Leighton's troop was able to pinpoint enemy locations within 30 feet.

But it wasn't easy: "The Germans knew who we were... they didn't give up their positions unless they had to. They knew we were going to radio back and they were going to get it."

His troop was not strictly a combat unit, so they were frequently trapped by the Germans and had to radio for help. Playing the waiting game is never easy — it is made more difficult when the enemy is attempting to kill you. Training didn't prepare these young men for the situations they found themselves in: "We trained pretty hard and we didn't think it was going to be a picnic. But to see the reality..."

Shocking conditions

They were also unprepared by the circumstances they found the Dutch people in. For five years, they had lived with Nazi tyranny. This last winter, a brutally cold one, had been made less endurable by German-controlled food shortages. City people from Amsterdam started 'food trips' in October, searching the countryside for potatoes, grain—anything edible.

It is estimated that over 50,000 to 100,00 people per day went on a food pilgrimage. But as the winter grew colder, the situation grew desperate. A passage in the Leighton's book reads: "I saw them trudging with their carts or their delivery cycles through layers of snow decimetres thick, against the icy east wind, but I also saw them lying along the road, slumped from weariness, paralyzed by the cold, frequently dying of exhaustion."

A starving, ravaged country greeted the Canadians. "They didn't have anything," Mr. Leighton says, his face drawn at the memory. "It was so sad. There's a war on and everyone's starving..."

One of Mr. Leighton's most disquieting memories involves the war's end. For a long time, his troop had managed to avoid many casualties. But two men were killed in one sudden sniper attack. Fifteen minutes later, on the radio, the end of the war was announced. "The snipers probably didn't know either," he says.

Gratitude

During and after the liberation, Mr. Leighton and many other Canadian soldiers shared their limited rations with the people of Holland. The Dutch have remembered these kindnesses, and they remember the sacrifice of Canadian lives lost in battle. They remember everything the Canadian troops did for their country.

So Mr. Leighton and his wife Helen travelled to Holland on April 30 to experience this gratitude. Four other members of Mr. Leighton's regiment also attended with their wives. About 135 veterans and their wives stayed with Dutch families in Aalten for about ten days. Sitting about three kilometres from the German border, Aalten is in the southeast corner of the country.

"We trained pretty hard and we didn't think it was going to be a picnic."

The difference in the appearance of the country was astonishing to Mr. Leighton. Holland is now an almost obsessively "clean and tidy" country. "It certainly didn't look like the same place," says Mr. Leighton.

Almost as surprising was the treatment the Canadians received from their Dutch hosts. The Leightons and one other couple stayed with the Udo-van Helden, and both Mr. and Mrs. Leighton were overwhelmed with their hospitality. Although both Mr. and Mrs. Udo-van Helden were children at the war's end, their lives were deeply affected by it. Mrs. Helden's father died in a German prisoner of war camp; her husband was sent away from his home and parents in The Hague to live in a safer farming area. "I don't think there's a family in Holland that didn't suffer some heartache," says Mrs. Leighton.

A trip to the Arnhem War Cemetery reminded the veterans of the 33 RCAF men who were killed during the airdrop. As in all Dutch war cemeteries, the graves are kept in pristine condition. Later that same evening, a Silent March was held. Hundreds of Aalten townspeople and the Canadian veterans walked through silent streets to the War Memorial. There, wreaths were laid, the silence undisturbed. "You could have heard a pin drop," says Mrs. Leighton. The evening ended with a service in 16th century church. In keeping with the feeling of the day, the entire service was conducted in French and English.

Visiting the Canadian War Cemetery at Groesbeek proved to be a particularly poignant experience. Princess Margaret of Holland took part in the ceremony, along with many international representatives. Looking out from the bleachers set up for the ceremony, the Canadians could see thousands of Dutch people lining the grass between the rows of graves where 2,800 Canadians are buried.

But the Leightons speak with particular emotion about the National Commemoration March of the Liberators in Apeldoorn. Although the 30 degree temperature was intensely hot, regiment members clad in heavy uniforms marched through the streets to give the salute to Princess Margaret at the review stand. The four kilometre long parade route was lined with 300,000 Dutch people whose tear-filled eyes and outstretched hands spoke of their gratitude as loudly as their cheers which continuously rang in the veteran's ears.

"Thank you, thank you, thank you." Two simple words which the Canadian veterans heard over and over again. "It was very, very emotional," says Mr. Leighton. "I'll never forget it."

"I got a chance to look at those faces. They looked like they were looking at my face or queen."

Musicians among the most prone to ear damage

reads the report. "Limiting exposure to hazardous levels of noise will help. And ear plugs should be used when operating power mowers or power tools at home."

Rock musicians have been getting a lot of press lately about the damage they may be inflicting on their ears by constantly performing in front of megawatt sound systems. The most visible rock star to admit to suffering permanent hearing loss is Pete Townshend, who — before resigning himself to accepting an editorial position with England's prestigious publishing firm, Faber and Faber — was the driving force behind The Who.

Several years ago he was diagnosed as having tinnitus, a hearing condition characterized by a ringing or buzzing in the ear.

There are some, however, who still don't believe that loud music can cause permanent hearing loss. "I used to play in a band, and my amplifier was a 500-watt Peavey — it didn't bother me a bit," says

Catherine Jackson's husband, Bryan. "And I played every night on the road for six years."

Mr. Jackson says that the Dominion "isn't very loud, but it depends on the band — some bands bring in 3,000-watt sound systems here with them."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Jackson tries to do the best with what hearing she's got left. "I don't answer the phone at night when the music's playing," she says. "I can't hear what people are saying on the phone when there's music on in the background."

"But as long as people look at me while they talk I'm fine. I've gotten used to relying on sign language and lip reading."

COMMUNITY NEWS

Baptist Church's history tells tale of faith

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Jean and George Crisp of Norland along with relatives Amalia and Ron Scott, Evelyn and Alan Skinner of Toronto, were among the many veterans and wives who attended the 45th anniversary of the liberation at Alton, Holland. In Rosebeek a Memorial Service was held at the Cemetery. At Appleton some 3,000 attended the parade with Princess Marguerite of the Netherlands taking the salute. Non walkers were transported by truck while some 350 people stood waving, cheering and passing out flowers at sides of the roads. The travellers also made return visits to Normandy, Dieppe, two lovely days in Paris and finally in Brussels. Welcome home George and Jean.

There are 50 available green composters for sale which you may purchase by calling Marg Michel at 454-1550 or if you wish, through the Township of Bexley at the Township Hall. This is a giant step towards cleaning up our environment. Get involved!

It's good to hear George Shepherd Sr. is out from hospital and coming along well at the home of his family, George Jr. and his wife Valerie in Cobocok.

I'm told Wilhemina Liscombe, also of Cobocok, is now home from a Toronto hospital. Hope you're back to good health soon "Willy."

Congratulations to Violet Greer of Cobocok who was the lucky winner of the $680 bingo jackpot at the Kirkfield Lions Bingo on Tuesday May 29.

Sympathy to Robin Hall of Burnt River, all relatives and friends of Robin's son, Glenn Waylett, who passed away recently.

Sympathy also to Charles, all the family and friends of Charlie's wife Betty Noel who died recently of cancer.

Kinmount Baptist Church celebrated its 50th anniversary on May 27 with a Pre Service Hymning. Order of Service: Hymn, prayers, acknowledgement from local council by Mr. Bryce Young, Somerville Township, hymn, a duet by Bill Wunker and Pastor

Payne, scripture reading by Neil Berry, recognition on this special occasion by MP Bill Scott, hymn, announcements, chorus of the month (junior choir), a message from Rev. Grover Crosby who's the Canadian President of Partners International, hymn, and benediction. The Sunday evening service started at 7 p.m. and included solos by Mrs. Bonnie Brumwell and Mr. Bill Wunker. The message was given by Rev. Jim Parker of Bobcaygeon Baptist Church.

According to the records, in the Autumn of 1933, Rev. M.B. Gillion of Bobcaygeon conducted evangelistic services at Norland and later at the Rock School north of Kinmount. In passing through Kinmount he became acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mark and Mr. Groat. This led to talk of holding meetings in the village of Kinmount. During the first winter some meetings were held in the Hall, but being a very large building, it did not prove a suitable place to continue services. For some time following, meetings were held weekly in the homes of young Christians and friends and in the village.

In the Spring of 1936 a lot was purchased from Mr. Austin Jackson and the building began under the direction of Mr. Fred Brumwell who drew the plans. Voluntary labour was given by local men and also from Bobcaygeon, Devitt Settlement and Norland. The building was ready for the opening service on Friday, June 22, 1936. Bert Austin wired the building and switched the lights on just in time for the service.

During the following winter Mr. F. Vaughan assisted the pastor, making it possible to conduct additional services and to do visitation work, which proved to be a real help. On May 23, 1940, a meeting was called for the organization of a Baptist Church in Kinmount, Ont. Guest and representatives were present from Toronto, Lindsay, Hamilton, Bobcaygeon, Furnace Falls, Medina and the Rock School in sufficient numbers to fill the building.

Upon request Pastor Gillion read the names of those desiring to form the church, producing the letters of those coming from other churches and reciting the experience of those uniting with a church for the first time. (It would seem from the records about 33 people.)

The first officers of the church were as follows: Pastor, Rev. M.B. Gillion; Deacons, Messrs. F.A. Mart, B. Schroeter, M.E. Groat; Clerk, Mr. B. Schroeter; Treasurer, Mr. F.A. Mark; S.S. Supt., Mr. Mark.

Winner of the Kinmount Legion 50/50 draw for $136 was Jack Rylance of Cobocok.

Joan Mills of Whitby was a weekend guest of Bill and Win Wilson at their Kinmount home.

John Pyke celebrated his birthday at the home of Helen Graham. Present were Mary Pyke, Elizabeth Fryer, Gil Graham, Beatrice and Russell McCaughy, Jason, Bill and Millie Moss.

It was a disappointing turnout for the AIDS

Awareness Program which was presented at the Norland Community Hall on Wednesday May 30. Just 20 people came to learn of a devastating virus that is killing people every day. There are some 3,330 people with AIDS in Canada alone, approximately 50,000 who are infected but show no symptoms, and thinking they are well. We were told that AIDS is primarily a sexually transmitted disease and people get infected through sexual intercourse, the sharing of needles, mother to unborn baby, contaminated blood products. It is not transmitted from insects, animals, coughing, sneezing, hankies, saunas, pools, hot tubs, toilets, dishes, glasses or food. The evening was very enlightening and there was a very good question/answer period and ended with a light lunch. Thanks to Jane Porter who travelled up to Norland from Lindsay to teach us an important lesson that seems to be part of life today. Of the 20 who attended, there were two teenaged boys, one young woman who was there in her capacity as a news reporter and the rest consisted of Senior Citizens who had made the effort to do the rest consisted of Senior Citizens who had made the effort to do what they deemed important for our younger people. Too bad the younger set didn't think the same way! What is that saying? "It can't happen to me!" Well, I hope not.

An update on Seniors Games: Five-pin bowling June 1, 10 a.m., Lindsay; Lawn bowling June 7, 9 a.m., Bobcaygeon; 9 hole golf, June 11, 11 a.m., Crestwood; 11 hole golf, same date, same place, at 9 a.m.

Well folks, stay well and happy and give me a call at 454-2395 if you wish your news aired in this column.

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Here we are home again from two weeks in British Columbia, visiting Andy Cooper and travelling with him around Victoria and up to Campbell River. There we visited Violet and Garnet Coulter. In Comox we had a visit with Ann and Paul Chevrier, Stan Hill and Angus and Geraldine Davies. A most satisfying holiday was spent there and in Smithers B.C., Red Deer Alta. and Tisdale Sask.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Restaurant, new lots are in the works

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

At the corner of Highway 648 and Fleming Road, the Mike Oram Construction Co. has begun digging a foundation. The plans for a Sportsman shop on this spot, mentioned a few weeks ago, have been changed and now you can look forward to a restaurant being built.

Farther along Fleming Road, about a quarter of a mile past the bank, is the site of an old molydenite mine, once known as the White Elephant. Built in 1917, parts of the cement foundation can still be seen. Land is being cleared in this area to promote the sale of eleven lots suitable for houses.

Once in a while someone arrives in the community who is able to revitalize the old lifestyle and inspire others to pitch in and get things done. Such a one was Sally Mather, who with her husband Jake, brought with her a zest for overcoming difficulties and proving that no problem was too great to be mastered. On arrival, about 40 years ago, Sally and Jake took over one of the original Wilberforce buildings and set up a boarding house business. A fire destroyed their home and later the Mathers moved to Clark's famous boarding house where Sally ran a successful business for many years. Sally, who recently passed away, was one of our greatest community workers who could be counted on for support for any local need. A generous soul, she held many showers in her big living room for local girls. The United Church in South Wilberforce received much of her attention. She has been credited with putting the church on its feet, working tirelessly as a social convener to raise money for that purpose. She served on two church committees and was a Life Member of the U.C.W. She was a Member of the Board of Stewards.

Sally was a member of Wilberforce Branch 624 of the Royal Canadian Legion. She won praise for the continued success of the annual Wildlife Dinner and did her part to bring about the installation in the Legion Hall of one of the most modern and finest kitchens in this area. One member said it all: "She was a good worker." She will be missed by many.

On Friday June 1, 800 young people graduated from Trent University in Peterborough. One of those was Barbara Taylor, daughter of Florence and Fred Taylor, who gained an Honours BA, majoring in sociology. Barbara looks forward to a future in social work, perhaps attending teacher's college in another year. Brother Greg Taylor is presently in California and in his work with General Motors, and sister Jane Taylor is a nurse at Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay. The success story of one Wilberforce family is one we can look to with pride.

The annual Midland Regiment reunion was held in Port Hope this year. Attending were Warren Bowen and Reg Schofield who carried the flags during the parade and the cenotaph wreath laying ceremony.

West Guilford...

A.C.W. spring deanery meeting was held at St. Peter's Anglican Church on May 17 with approximately 54 ladies in attendance from Victoria-Haliburton deanery. The Rev. Brian Parker officiated at the communion service and the Rev. Bill Major, chief executive officer for Downtown Churchworkers Association in Toronto, was guest speaker.

On May 29, St. Peter's Church hosted the St. Margaret's Guild from St. John's Anglican of Peterborough. Julie Gray and Rose Barry showed their slides and presented their talk on their trip with medical teams to Honduras.

Terry and John Carr's daughter, Christine Danielle, was baptized at St. Andrew's Anglican Church on Sunday May 27. Godparents are Janet and Elwood Morrison.

Another note about West Guilford Reunion on July 1. It begins now with you getting in touch with people you know would like to be there, by providing scrap book material for someone who is making albums, or simply by planning to be there. Your presence is what is most required to make the dance on June 30 in the evening or the event itself on July 1 a success.

Once again we are grandparents, this time of a granddaughter Daphne Mavis, born to George and Shireen Cooper on May 31, 1990. All's well, thanks be to God.

Wheelchair facilities now in

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

On Sunday, January 3, the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band, accompanied by colour party and several Branch and Ladies Auxiliary members, attended the annual F4 Drumhead Service which was held at Branch 497, Omemee.

Wheelchair washrooms became a reality last week when Comrades Grenville Draper and Wally Chambers completed the fourth washroom in your branch. This work was done on a volunteer basis, and these two members have rendered a great service not only to Legion members, but to the general public when they attend Legion functions.

The D.V.A. representative for this area, Gary Barker, will attend at the Legion on July 31. Please call Lloyd Whittaker for an appointment.

Jack Bassett will be chairing the blood donor clinic at the Legion to be held July 10 from 2 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. Comrade Bassett will need volunteers to help, and he hopes a large number will attend to give the gift of life.

The clubroom winners in Elsie Massey's Saturday program were Chris Mawbey and Harry Crittendon. Congratulations.

Sympathy is extended to Jan and Jim Tice who attended a funeral for a family member this week near Rochester, N.Y.

The Ladies have been catering a heavy schedule recently. Their next flea market is June 23. They are looking forward to their own annual dinner on June 18.

The last branch general meeting until September will be held on Thursday June 7, at 8 p.m.

Bake sale planned

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

On May 17 the Anglican Ladies met at the charming home of Nancy Morley on Kawagama Lake. It was a rainy day but there was a good attendance. Future activities were discussed. A bake sale is planned for July 21.

The Dorset Senior Club held a general business meeting last Wednesday. Among other things discussed was the coming Flea Market and Bake Sale to be on Saturday, June 30. This will be at the Centre beginning at 9 a.m. A new slate of officers was elected and will take over their duties in September 1990. They are: President Len Whitworth; Vice-President Peggy Walker; Secretary Mary Fitz-gibbon; Treasurer Ralph Raven.

The last meeting of this season will be on June 13 with a pot luck dinner at 6 p.m. On July 2 a number of the group are going by bus to Toronto to attend the Jays baseball game.

There will be a raffle in August for a quilt, a stained glass lamp and a sun catcher, all the handwork of Dorset seniors.

'How many times is there a Royal Ball you're invited to,' asks West Guilford's Cecilia Scott whose efforts for St. John Ambulance were rewarded in a special way.

A loyal volunteer gets taste of pomp

by MICHAEL WOLOSCHUK
Staff Reporter

Cecilia Scott got her shot at attending a once-in-a-lifetime event last month.

She was invited to a Royal Ball in Toronto which was attended by His Royal Highness, The Duke of Gloucester.

"How many times is there a Royal Ball that you're invited to?" asks an excited Mrs. Scott. "It was interesting."

The ball was a fundraising event for St. John Ambulance and it took place at Toronto's Convention Centre.

Mrs. Scott has been involved with St. John Ambulance for the past 17 years, during which she has logged an incredible 14,000 hours of volunteer time.

The Toronto native now living in West Guilford says she's done "just about everything for them," including attending the Mississauga disaster and the Papal visit to Toronto.

Since she's moved to the Highlands, Mrs. Scott says she hasn't been able to put in the hours she used to — but she still does a lot of paperwork for the agency here.

"It's nice to be able to contribute something," she says. "I didn't want to give it up completely when I moved up here."

She's not going to let one attendance at a Royal Ball go to her head, however.

"It was just your average Royal Ball," she says. "You know, a lot of pomp and pageantry."

COMMUNITY NEWS

Obituary

Francis Noble

The community was saddened to learn of the death on Friday, May 11, 1990 of Francis Ernest Noble in his 80th year.

The late Francis Noble was born in Essonville, Ontario, the youngest son of the late John James and Elizabeth Noble. He married Norma (McCrea) on April 27, 1935. They were blessed with a long life of 55 happy years together. He is survived by a daughter, Donna (Dowding), son-in-law David of Willowdale, Ontario, a son Bryan, daughter-in-law Mary of Gravenhurst, Ontario, and two grand-daughters, Sandra and Sherry Noble.

Francis Noble lived on the homestead in Essonville until 1949. They then moved to Wilberforce, Ontario and built their own home on beautiful lakeshore property where he resided until the time of his death.

The late Francis Noble was a member of the Salvation Army and for 32 years held the rank of "Corps Sergeant Major" of the Haliburton Corps. He was a devout Christian gentleman, who had a deep concern for his family and for people.

Left to mourn his loss besides his wife and family are brothers Hartman of Lindsay, John of Essonville, and sister Ethel (Mrs. Gordon McCrea) of Bobcaygeon, Ontario. He was predeceased by Annie, Bertha and Janie. He is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

The funeral service was held on Monday, May 14, 1990 from the chapel of Gordon Monk Funeral Home, conducted by Major Betty Barnum of the Salvation Army assisted by Capt. Herran Venables. Rev. Maurice Bradley of Wilberforce United Church also paid tribute.

Pallbearers were all nephews: Ken Noble of Essonville, Earle Noble of Omeme, Floyd McCrea of Bobcaygeon, Wayne McCrea of Peterborough, Mervyn Pass of Lindsay and Norman Silver of Kinmount.

CONTRACTOR EXPANDS: J.D. Robinson Construction has expanded to facilities on the Industrial Park Road in Haliburton. The largest addition is this bright, spacious shop where the company does custom woodworking, from kitchen cupboards to fine cabinets. Cabinet maker Bob Deremo, right, chats with visitors during an open house at the facilities last Saturday.

Students, teachers counting the days till summer holidays

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

STUDENTS AND TEACHERS are counting the days until school is over. That will be sooner for some than others, depending on who is exempt from writing final exams. Unfortunately for the teachers, they have to stay around to mark exams and finish final marks. Students who have any chance of being exempted are trying very hard. Who wants to have to be studying if you can be swimming, sunbathing or relaxing with no thoughts of school until next year?

I don't think parents and teachers realize how hard it is to concentrate at this time of year. We have been in school for ten months with the same people and teachers and are getting tired of the whole concept. The words study, homework and school are enough to make most students vomit. So hopefully parents and teachers will take this into consideration when reading our ever-approaching report cards.

There is a teacher and maybe even some students who care about Canada. Mr. Wallace belongs to a group of people in Minden who are concerned about what they want Canada to be. He organized to distribute a sheet that asked the question "Why is Canada unique?" Students and parents are urged to return this to their home form teacher by Friday. The good positive aspects will be printed in the paper. Mr. Wallace is looking for some good things about Canada since the problems that our country faces, such as Meech Lake and tolerance, will greatly effect our future. Students and many adults, who have perhaps not been anywhere else, don't realize how fortunate we really are. This is very evident; just watch every morning in home form when the national anthem is played.

I asked Mr. Wallace why he is doing this. "I wanted to do something," he said. "I felt powerless because the government is making decisions for us, thinking it's what we want, but how do they know?" Show Mr. Wallace and the community a positive aspect of Canada and show that you do care about your future.

Track and field participants travelled to OFFSA last Thursday to compete. Unfortunately they didn't do very well. Chris Greenfield was ranked second in Ontario before going into the 400m race but did not run as well as usual. This seemed to be the case for all those participating. Overall though, track and field had a very successful year and we'll look forward to next year's competition.

IN MEMORIAM

MARGUERITE SCOTT, dear mother and grandmother, June 7, 1987.
God looked around his garden,
And found an empty space,
He then looked upon this earth,
And saw your tired face.
He put his arms around you,
And lifted you to rest,
God's Garden must be beautiful.
He only takes the best.
He knew what you were suffering.
He knew that you were in pain.
He knew that you would never get well on this earth again.
He saw the road was getting rough,
And the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed your worried eyes,
And whispered peace by thine.
It broke our hearts to lose you mom,
But you didn't go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.
Always remembered by
Curry, Sandra, Heidi and Billy. 32-P-6

SIMS, TOOTS (ELSIE) In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother who passed away June 7, 1989.
Everyday in some small way,
Memories of you come our way;
Though absent, you are ever near,
Still missed, loved, always dear.
Sadly missed by Shirley, Sandy and Terry. 32-P-6

SIMS In loving memory of a dear mother Elsie who passed away June 7, 1989.
I think of you today with love,
As I have often done,
I feel again the bitter blow,
That never should have come.
They say that time heals everything,
I know that isn't so,
Because it hurts as much today,
As it did one year ago.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by daughter,
Helen and Ross. 32-P-6
